FORD DECLARES FOR COOLIDGE

'I AM FOR HIM; GOOD MAN,' SAYS HENRY

Auto Builder to Spend $110,000,000, but He Won't Borrow a Penny

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 19 (Copyright, 1923, by Star Company, Inc., and distributed by C. N. S.)—Henry Ford has joined the Coolidge band wagon. The automobile manufacturer said without any qualification:

"I'm for Coolidge." He added: "He's a good man."

W. J. Cameron, editor of the Dearborn Independent, in unmistakable language indicated that Ford was not and had no intention of becoming a candidate for the presidency.

In order to achieve his goal of 10,000 cars a day (he said present production approximates 7,000 a day) Ford revealed that he is expanding all his plant facilities. One of his men said the cost of Mr. Ford's program would be $110,000,000, and Ford, assuring that the company was not borrowing a dollar, explained improvements would be made solely out of earnings.

Ford said that during 1923 his sales were unprecedentedly large, but that profits will not prove to be as large as in some past years.

"Rents are too high," said Ford. "We are going to start to build one-family houses for our workers, just as we build automobiles, in quantity, near our plants and sell them to our workers."

"The thing behind the demand for cars is the great desire of the people for them. Hardly anyone can perform his business nowadays without a car. The people want them and find some way to get them."

As in New York the streets of the

MARILYN MILLER AND MARY EATON

"Sally" star said she had tonsilitis and was excused from the show, but she went to a cabaret, and when Ziegfeld heard about it he discharged her. She denies she is jealous of Mary Eaton, the new star, but Ziegfeld says the green-eyed monster has a strangle-hold on Marilyn.

And that this is the real reason why the break between Florenz and his former star in "Sally," the "Follies," et cetera.

The same back-stage version has it that immediately when a Ziegfeld spy, or friend, saw her later in the cabaret with her husband, Jack

SOCIETY MATRONS BAN DRINK

"Hip Flask" Revelry at Back Bay Dances Scored by Patronesses

Dances, balls and other social affairs in Boston's exclusive smart set have developed into such drinking affiars that society women have announced their intention of withdrawing their names as hostesses for future affairs unless means are taken immediately to curb the drinking.

Their stand may threaten the big Charity Ball this year, an annual affair noted for its gayety and brilliance. It is typically "society," being held for the benefit of the Free Hospital for Women.

The drinking is of the hip flask variety, openly carried on. It is nothing unusual to see a pretty deb or sub deb and her escort, under the influence of liquor.

"TIME TO STOP IT."

"It is time something was done to stop all this," said Mrs. Ronald T. Lyman of No. 29 Beacon street.

"Everybody knows there is drinking, a lot of drinking, at these affairs. And I am sorry to say that many of the dances which used to be so pretty, are being spoiled by the drinking. It should be stopped. People drink very openly and unadvisedly and it is not pretty in the

"There was a lot of criticism last year after the Costume Ball, because of the drinking that was done so openly and unattractively. There was a lot of feeling then and has been since."

BLAMES HTELS.

OtOther prominent women who acted as hostesses at last year's Charity Ball joined with Mrs. Lyman in voicing their feelings on the subject. Said Mrs. F. D. W. Richardson, a member of last year's Costume Ball committee: "It is not these in charge of the balls and social affairs that are to blame. It is the hotels. As long as hotels run wide open there will be drinking. And as long

MAJ. DUANE SUSPENDED BY LEGION

Charged With Circulating Unsubstantiated Statements About Members

Major James T. Duane, formerly State commander of the American Legion, has been suspended from his own Legion post because it is charged he circulated "unsubstantiated statements" about certain members.

He was suspended from the James R. Kirby Post at Clinton on November 26. News of the suspension did not become public until an investigation was started by Department Commander Clarence R. Edwards.

According to Department Adjutant Leo A. Spillane, General Edwards is disturbed about the suspension and is anxious that a reinstatement vote be taken soon, even if a special meeting is called for the purpose.

According to members of the post, the suspension followed statements made about someone connected with the post, and which were not substantiated later.

Major Duane refused to discuss the situation today, saying the post had a publicity committee and that all information must be obtained from that committee, John Brewster, chairman of that committee, was loath to give any information on account of the instruction to secrecy from the post.

Major J. T. Duane

Vice Commander Oscar Gralchen, elected commander for 1924, A. Stanley Llewellyn and E. T. Willson, members of the executive committee, style themselves the "accused." They said they would be willing to have the whole affair aired in public were it not for the secrecy vote taken.

Chairman Brewster did admit that the suspension was by vote of the James R. Kirby post members, acting on recommendation of the executive committee, and when Mr. Willson suggested that the word "unanimously" be included in the statement, accepted the amendment. "It's a closed incident so far as the

AUTO HITS CHARLESTOWN COP AND DASHES AWAY

An automobilist drove through Charlestown early today, struck and injured Patrolman J. J. McGovern of Station 15 and sped away without making known his identity.

The accident occurred while Policeman McGovern was crossing Chelsea street, at the foot of Bunker Hill street, to assist another policeman in making an arrest. The latter was Patrolman Kimball.

McGovern's injuries, although painful, are not serious. They consist of cuts and bruises to the face and head.

Patrolman Kimball traced the accident machine to Chelsea square, where it disappeared down a branch street. The registration plate numbers were not obtained.

McGovern is thirty-three years old. He lives at No. 83 Condon street, East Boston.

SURGEON SAVES CONVICT'S LIFE

Strange thing, this civilization.

Take Harry Boland for instance. The world branded Harry as a common and notorious thief.

Then shood him into State's prison for five years.

Late Tuesday night Harry was taken ill in his cell. Left alone he would have died and the world would have been rid of a "common and notorious thief."

But prison officials rushed Harry into the hospital, summoned medical help of the sort only millionaires can afford and at midnight while the prison slept Harry was on the operating table under the knife.

Over him bent Dr. Howard A. Lothrop, Back Bay surgeon and Harvard Medical School professor. Harry's trouble was acute appendicitis. Dr. Lothrop saved his life.

Today the "common and notorious thief" is in the prison hospital, where for six weeks he will receive such dainties as cream, milk, potatoes, et cetera.

The State will pay the bills.

CHESTER CONCESSION ANNULLED BY TURKS

London, Dec. 19.—A telegram from Angora received in Constantinople states that the Commissioner of Works has notified the agent of Colonel Clayton-Kennedy of the annulment of the Chester Concession for Anatolian development, says a Reuter dispatch from Constantinople this afternoon.

The Chester Concession granted a group of American capitalists led by Admiral Chester valuable rail and oil properties in Anatolia.

75 DASH FROM FIRES IN SOUTH END AND S. BOSTON

With the temperature around the freezing point, 75 persons were driven from their homes today by three fires in South Boston and the South End.

Numbers 83-84 Dartmouth street, 430 Massachusetts avenue and 70 Tudor street, South Boston, were the fire scenes. Total damage is fixed at $2,500.

In Dartmouth street the one-story bakery of Amastos Michos was destroyed. Damage is reported as $1,000 and spontaneous combustion as the cause.

Box 1554, sounded by Patrolman Goodfellow, was for a fire in the basement of the five-story lodging house of Jacob Alberts at No. 430 Massachusetts avenue, where smoke

POPE SEEKS TO MEDIATE FOR FRANCO-GERMAN PEACE

Rome, Dec. 19 (AP).—Pope Pius is still negotiating with France and Germany with regard to his intention to insert in his allocution at tomorrow's secret consistory a passage concerning the situation in Central Europe, with special reference to the Ruhr question.

The Pontiff does not wish to be misunderstood by either side and desires to pronounce a word of amity and Christmas peace and good will in order to bring about an understanding satisfactory to both parties.

According to reports received by the Vatican, German prisoners from the Ruhr are being detained along the Atlantic coast of France under discomforting conditions, while a large number of the Germans compelled to leave the Ruhr region are scattered about other parts of Germany, unemployed and starving—a burden upon the remainder of the population and the government.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER DYING

Flaming Liquid Ignites Clothing of Victims in South Boston Flareup

When a pan of grease overturned and caught fire on the kitchen stove of Simon Moser's humble South Boston home today, Simon made a lunge for one object—a still.

He was hurrying it to the back door to hurt it into space when it exploded.

Immediately his young wife, Mary, and their daughter, Mary, six years old, were ablaze.

The still had scattered fire which ignited their clothing. Moser snuffed out the flames, but not before they had eaten into the flesh of mother and child from head to feet.

An ambulance took Moser and his family to the City Hospital.

There doctors believe the mother and child will die.

Moser was burned, but not seriously.

Firemen extinguished the blaze in the house and police gathered up fragments of the still.

When Moser is freed at the hospital he will probably be arrested.

If he hadn't been violating the law by making hooch in his home in Athenx street he might have spent Christmas with a happy wife and daughter.

B. & M. CONDUCTOR SLASHED, DYING

Worcester, Dec. 19.—Fred E. Mellon, 26 Rhode Island avenue, Somerville, a freight conductor on the Boston & Maine Railroad, is dying at City Hospital. He was found with his throat cut in the B. & M. yards here today. He was in charge of a train which arrived from Portland. He vanished. When a searching party hunted him they happened on a blood trail which led to Mellon staggering into a switchman's shanty.

He told police he was assaulted. He was not robbed. Hint of attempted suicide is being investigated.

FIRE CHAUFFEUR INJURED SAVING LIFE OF AUTOIST

Frank Shepard, manager of the General Baking Company, narrowly escaped death today when Engine 26, collided with his automobile near Bunker Hill and Charles streets, Charlestown.

In an effort to avoid the accident, Chauffeur Homer Brown swerved too near the curbing and the fire engine tipped over on the sidewalk, injuring Brown who is at Relief Hospital. A fireman riding on the rear jumped.

Shepard, who lives at No. 316 Massachusetts avenue, Lexington, came out of it without a scratch. Engine 26 was on its way to a fire at Park and Cambridge streets.

MAY CALL OFF BALL.

Mrs. Fred S. Whitwell, a patroness of last year's costume ball, one of society's most brilliant annual functions said today that it was rumored the ball would not be held this year.

"But I don't think it was because of liquor having been used or lack of hostesses," she added.

Mrs. F. L. Higginson, another patroness prominent in society, said: "There has been a lot of feeling about the risking question for some time."

Mrs. Philip S. Sears, member of the costume ball committee, said: "Nothing has been decided as yet as to this year's ball if there is one."

Scientific Era Not the Christian, Says Dr. Crapsey

Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 19.—"The end of the Christian era has come and mankind has entered the scientific era, in the opinion of Dr. Algernon Sidney Crapsey, who was convicted of heresy by the Episcopal Church seventeen years ago.

One-third of the Episcopalian clergymen do not believe the story of the Virgin birth, the story of the origin of man or that the world was created in six days, He said:

"In my case," he said, "the court was picked to convict and did so. That will happen in this case if there is a trial, but I believe such a storm of protest will break upon the bishops that they will not dare to have a trial."

DORIS KEANE BALKS AT BIG BILL AND IS SUED

DORIS KEANE

New York, Dec. 19.—Doris Keane Sidney, known on the legitimate stage as Doris Keane, named defendant in a suit for $20,884, brought by Dr. Charles F. A. Locke surgeon, as an aftermath of Miss Keane's exercise of the womanly prerogative of changing her mind, has filed an amended answer to his action.

Dr. Locke alleges in his complaint that he journeyed to Paris, at Miss Keane's behest, in April last, before the defendant, who had cabled to him from Marienbad requisitioning his services, decided not to be operated upon.

Miss Keane in her amended answer in which she states that under the French law, no physician, unless he first qualified by receiving a diploma from a French medical school or academy, would be permitted to perform an operation within the boundaries of France.

middle west are congested with cars.

Mr. Ford's remedy for street congestion is:

"Keep putting cars into the streets," he said, "then the people who use cars will find a better way of meeting the crowded conditions."

Ford is trying out wireless as a means of communication among his various plants. One new idea is the trying out of small rural plants near Dearborn for the making of parts. Ford thinks that in the future industrial plants may be decentralized in this way so that workingmen can more readily have their homes in the country.

One rumor had it that Ford would take over a company which makes middle grade cars between the Ford and the Lincoln. Henry Ford said he had no intention of changing the character of his business and did not intend to build up a competitive company modelled after the General Motors, which has a product for every price group.

NOTE SHE FINDS TELLS WHAT LOVE IS

After two or three million years of research and speculation, it looks as though the world is about to learn just what love is and why and whence—nay, perhaps even where fore!

New York, Dec. 19.—Warren B. Rishel, president of the Alwar Desk Company of New York, in contesting a suit for divorce brought by Lila B. Rishel of No. 1160 Fifth avenue. She asserts he was overfond of Gladys Lehman and several other women.

Mr. Rishel responds in affidavits he gave his wife a $2,000 solitaire, $5,000 worth of pearls, a $15,000 diamond necklace and an assortment of other jewels to prove his love.

But Mrs. Rishel replied by filing a note, written on pink paper, which she says she found in his pocket, and which raises the whole love question anew. She asserts Mrs. Lehman wrote the note, which reads:

"Love is hot. Heat is life. It creates Heaven.

"Only one love is true and great. We are gods but once.

"Sin is not purged by prayer, fasting and self-mutilation, but by love."

"Love is an art, not a science; we can be taught a science. In the realm of the highest life values, we do not buy and sell, we give and receive. When love dies, we die. From then on we are buried: we merely exist. Love excuses everything—among men."

"Love is the eye of the soul. The world was made for lovers. The highest love is a thing of destiny and has its source among the stars. One who loves you is your best priest.

"There are some who think the absence of love to be a virtue and who speak of the crimes of love. But there can be no virtue that is not love's forbidding, no vice that is not love's denial. The mind ever seeks perfect truth; the heart, perfect love; and both quests lead beyond the grave.

"There is no justice without love, no understanding without love and no man finds himself until he loves a woman. It is impossible to have permanent human relations without love. Man is journeying from chaos to law and the road is love."

Justice Cohalan, after scanning the epitome of Eros, decided to allow Mrs. Rishel $50 a week alimony and $500 a week counsel fees. He surveyed with interest the exhibit attempting to measure, weigh, analyze, segregate, solve and calculate the power, density and destiny of love, but made no comment, pending the trial of the suit.

Liquor in Stomach Is "Transporting," Rules Judge

Washington, Dec. 19.—Liquor in the stomach of an automobile driver is being transported entirely as much as if it were secreted in the body of the rum-running automobile, Judge Gus A. Schuldt of Traffic Court declared.

He therefore favors seizing the machines of drunken motorists in exactly the same manner as bootlegging automobiles are confiscated.

"An autoist with liquor in his stomach is far more dangerous than one with liquor in his car," said Judge Schuldt. "The Volstead Act provides that if a person is found guilty of transporting intoxicating liquors his car must be confiscated.

"It seems to me the fact that a person was transporting liquor in his stomach instead of his car should be just as much reason for confiscating the car, if not more."

MARILYN "ILL," BUT BOBS UP IN CABARET

Pickford, Florens was telephoned to.

The break followed.

The famous producer claims he "fired" the fair Marilyn Miller.

Marilyn claims she quit him cold.

M. L. Malevinsky, attorney for Marilyn, says Ziegfeld is ill of Palm Beachitis and is using kid gloves and "Kid Boots," the play in which he starred beautiful Mary Eaton, to "toy with beauty." Those were Mr. Malevinsky's words.

Jealousy against Mary Eaton on the part of Marilyn Miller, is the reason given by a representative of Mr. Ziegfeld at his New York offices.

Anyway one looks at it somebody is getting a lot of publicity out of the jam.

And Miss Miller is out of a job, but does not look worried.

Both girls, much alike in talent and beauty, were in the "Follies of 1920," according to the Ziegfeld representative. Then Miss Miller was elevated to stardom, Miss Eaton remaining in the Follies. The former became ill in Philadelphia and for three weeks Miss Eaton took her place.

No money was asked back at the box office, the representative says, and Mr. Ziegfeld began to realize the possibilities of stardom in Miss Eaton.

Marilyn kicked hard with her dainty pumps when Florens proposed last Spring, while "Sally" was playing the city which made at least one kind of beer famous, putting Miss Mary Eaton in a play of her own in the Fall. Mr. Ziegfeld bowed to Marilyn's protest.

All controversy ended when Miss Eaton scored a big hit in "Kid Boots" in Detroit two weeks ago.

And now comes the Springfield story of Inryngulis and cabaretitis.

KING GEORGE of Greece was notified yesterday that Greece could do without him and requested to leave the country, taking his Queen with him. They left last night. King George will not, like Henry the Second of England, exclaim: "Shame on a beaten King," turn his face to the wall and die. He will turn his face toward Paris or Monte Carlo, excellent cooking and plenty of smoke in both places, and play King Safety. That's better than being a real king, anywhere outside of England, now.

STRANGE NEW murders based on "human triangles" will continue until men change. Read Mrs. Vetter's confession, condensed. She and her husband are accused of murdering Jack Storey:

"JUST before my baby was born, I told my husband all about Jack Storey, and how I knew him, before I was married. Every night my husband would come home from work and say: 'I don't trust you, and I am suspicious about that baby!' I swore that I had been a good wife ever since I married, but every night he accused me. So I said, 'I'll bring Jack Storey here to the house, and you can hide and listen, and you'll know by what he says that I have been straight since I married you.'

"She brought Jack Storey at two in the morning. She and her husband filled him, with an iron bar and a knife. They wrapped his body in old carpet rags, put it in the Ford sedan, "and put the baby in the car over him in the swing cot. We drove to Howard Beach. Together we threw his body into the water. My husband had put his revolver in his pocket. I took it and put it in the crib under the baby. It was loaded."

THAT was all, except that they took the dead man's pocket book, with $700, and the turned his pockets inside out, "so the police would think he had been killed for his money." There are, in little wooden houses you see along the road, tragedies that surpass imagination, and jealousy underlies many of them.

THIS earth has a hard core, like a baseball, or a golf ball. It is a gigantic sphere, bearing a pressure of 25,000 pounds to the square inch, according to reports made to the Washington Academy of Sciences.

WHILE that central sphere, four thousand miles in diameter, is probably made of iron, a great magnet, perhaps, some believe it may be made largely of gold, platinum, or both. Those heavier metals would work downward toward the centre. What desperate efforts men would make to dig down to that central core, if they could be sure that the gold and platinum were there. Men will dig a hole through the earth some day, using the sun's power to dig. But by that time gold will no longer be money, and money will no longer be so important.

PLATINUM, more valuable than gold, may be worth $700 a pound. That sounds costly. But think of radium, with which the market is now glutted. We had almost a monopoly of the precious substance here, for a while. But great deposits of radium-yielding pitch blende found in the Belgian Congo have upset the market, and the price dropped to about thirty-five million dollars a pound.

A short time ago, it was thought there was not more than half an ounce of radium in all the world.

IT IS now believed that radium in the sun accounts for the enduring power of that star, sending out light and heat through hundreds of millions of years, with a certainty of lasting hundreds of millions years more. We had plenty of radium here, once, if it be true that lead is radium that has lost its power. If the stars are fountains of radio-active power, do they grow quiet like our earth, and become planets of some larger sun, when their radio active energy dies?

YESTERDAY the greatest power machine on earth was started at Niagara Falls. A 750,000 horsepower water wheel, turbine turns the rushing water into an obedient servant. The electric generator for this power unit weighs more than 600 tons, and 3,500 cubic feet of water, per second, plus the drop, are required to run the turbine. Two similar plants will start next year, and in a century that will all seem as primitive as Fulton's first steamboat. The real power to be tapped is in the sun, and in the turning earth below our feet. We are like microbes, living on a driving wheel, and building windmills for power.

MR. HUGHES tells Russia this country can't deal or negotiate with them until they stop their propaganda "to overturn the institutions of this country." We must have little faith in our institutions if we think Russia can overturn them, and Russia uses only words, "Free Speech." We talk freely enough about Russia. Heaven knows, and our President denounces her government, to his heart's content. What's the difference?

THE BRITISH look at it more philosophically. Lord Beaverbrooke said, on his visit here, "We Britishers deal with cannibals, if they have money to buy, or anything to sell." Why would we not deal with Russia?

THE NATION of the world celebrated on Monday, the 20th anniversary of the "right brothers' "first flight." Frederick Landis reminds you that a newspaperman reporting the event seriously and accurately, was discharged "for trying to play a joke on his readers." Also some Congressmen that voted funds to try out Morse's "new idea" of sending messages by telegraph were put out of office by their constituents, who disapproved "squandering public money on foolish experiments."

URGED TO DEED BY CONSCIENCE, TELLS COURT

Paris, Dec. 19.—Calmly powdering her nose and combing her hair while the prosecutor pictured her as a dangerous anarchist, chic and demure Mlle. Germaine Berton, "The Red Virgin," has taken a leaf out of the book of American sister murderesses as she stands trial for the slaying of Marius Plateau, Royalist leader.

Twenty years old, she employed the arts of Mother Eve while waiting her turn to testify. Then, tense, dramatic, she poured forth a passionate declaration of confession and pride.

"My conscience forced me to kill," she told the court. "I killed—I have no regret. I am proud and ready to submit to punishment, whatever it may be."

Previously the prosecutor had declared that "the Red Virgin" had spread terror among the bourgeoisie by "dynamite or poison, by the revolver, or the grenade and by

The charges left her cold, unmoved. But when the time came to talk of the day she walked into the office of a Royalist newspaper, asked for Leon Daudet and, missing him, murdered Plateau, she launched into sheer drama.

She told proudly of her efforts to kill Daudet, who she declared, had been trying to impose royalism on the ruins of the Motherland."

Despite the declaration that she had no regret, "the Red Virgin" admitted she had shot herself in an attempt to commit suicide after killing Plateau.

Mrs. Vetter Takes Victim to Her Home and Kills Him With an Iron Bar

New York, Dec. 19.—The prosecution rested its case against Ernest and Marie Vetter, accused of murdering Alonzo J. Storey, in the Queens County Court at Long Island City, with the reading to the jury of the alleged confession of Mrs. Vetter that she and her husband killed Storey in a life-and-death struggle in their home at Glendale.

The confession, whose introduction as evidence was vigorously opposed by Sidney Rosenthal, counsel for the defence, related that Mrs. Vetter had been intimate with Storey before her marriage and that her husband's knowledge of this caused him to mistrust her and to doubt the paternity of their baby girl. It was this which had led to the situation which produced the killing. In the midst of the attorney's arguments Mrs. Vetter collapsed and had to be carried from the court.

TOOK STOREY HOME.

Storey was induced to come to the Vetter home the night of his death so that Vetter could hear him talk to his wife and learn from that that he had no cause to mistrust her now, Mrs. Vetter's confession said. This was arranged and Mrs. Vater met Storey around 2 a. m. at the street car.

"Then Storey and I went to my house," the document said, "and went into my front room. He sat down on the settee and pulled me down alongside of him, and while I started to tell him of the wrong things he had done, 'Now, don't be so foolish, don't feel that way about things,' he said. Then he grabbed hold of me and attempted to kiss me, and I said, 'Don't do that, Jack. Wait a minute. I'll go out in the kitchen and get you something to drink.' I went out in the kitchen and poured out a drink of whiskey for him and got an iron bar that was in the closet.

"He drank the whiskey and then pulled me down beside him again. 'Now listen, Jack, I want to tell my husband everything.' He said, 'Don't be so foolish.'

"Then he grabbed hold of me and tried to force me to him. I then pulled out the iron bar and struck him toward the back of the head. He reeled a little and then I called, 'Honey, help' My husband came in and punched Storey and got him down on the floor. I then hit Storey about seven times, always on the head. Then I saw that he was getting the best of my husband and I went out to the kitchen and got a knife and gave it to my husband and took Storey's knife away from him."

The officers seized six cases of whiskey.

W. T. A. Fitzgerald Has Birthday; Now He Is Fifty-two

William T. A. Fitzgerald, lawyer, and for years registrar of deeds of Suffolk County, is fifty-two years old today. Born in Boston and educated here, Attorney Fitzgerald received his degree at Boston University and is one of the most popular grads ever turned out of that institution. He has been sent to the State House as representative and Senator and was a delegate to the national Democratic convention at St. Louis in 1904. He ran for Mayor of Boston in 1921.

WILL FIGHT TO FINISH IN SENATE

Deadlock on Interstate Committee Head Develops Into Endurance Contest

Washington, Dec. 19 (I.N.S.)—The protracted deadlock over Republican organization of the Senate today developed aspects of an endurance contest between the militant band of insurgent Progressives and unrelenting Republican Regulars.

Leaders of both factions urged their followers to a finish fight in the contest over election of a chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

The clash has now blocked legislative business in the Senate for more than two weeks. Unless some unexpected "break" occurs, it is apparent today, a decision will not be reached until after Congress returns from its holiday vacation, early in the new year.

The Progressive insurgents, meanwhile, concentrated on gaining new support for their compromise candidate, Senator James Couzens of Michigan, while Administration leaders sought to stem further defections from the original followers of Senator Albert B. Cummins of Iowa, the Regulars hoping for an ultimate victory through a bolt of Insurgents.

Peace negotiations continued in Senate cloakrooms, but apparently to no avail. Administration leaders declared there would be no compromise with the Insurgents, even though a Democrat were elected to the chairmanship.

A new voice was raised in today's peace negotiations. It was that of Senator Cummins himself. Cummins, supported by one group and bitterly attacked by the other, has swung his personal support to Senator Couzens, the Insurgents' own compromise candidate. He said he believed Couzens "would make an ideal chairman of the committee."

Senator Borah condemned Administration leaders in refusing to accept any compromise.

Rents of 20 Lynn Tenants Slashed by Landlord

Marsh W. Dustin, a real estate man of Central square, Lynn, surprised twenty tenants in the Gladstone apartments on Newhall street, Lynn, by announcing a rent reduction of fifty cents a week to continue in force until further notice. Mr. Dustin said most of his tenants are shoe workers and that in view of the present depression in the shoe industry he considered the reduction an appropriate Christmas present.

RAIN TO FOLLOW COLD WAVE

Northfield, Vt. is the coldest spot in New England today. The temperature there registers zero.

According to the weather man, the cold weather that Boston has been experiencing is almost over. Tomorrow we will have rain or a change and Northern New England will have plenty of snow he says.

The temperature in Boston and vicinity has been rapidly rising since last night, and will continue to rise until the rain comes because of warm winds, sweeping north towards New England.

POISONOUS BOOZE SOLD SICK VETS

Poisonous booze, with the menace of death in every bottle, is being sold by Chelsea bootleggers, women as well as men, to maimed and injured war veterans, sick sailors off our battleships and the inmates of the Chelsea Old Soldiers' Home and patients at the Chelsea Naval Hospital.

These charges, made by Charles T. Trembly and Hugh Wylie, Federal prohibition agents, resulted in Assistant United States Attorney Elihu Stone filing four petitions in the United States courts asking that injunctions be granted and the places closed.

The places which it is alleged are peddling moonshine of the rottenest kind are—a near beer saloon on Winnisimmet street and a tobacco store and lunch counter on Pearl street.

Cited in the petitions are Albert Berkman and his wife, Sarah, who conduct the Broadway place with Maxie W. Felker of Denver, Colo., as owner of the property; Arthur S. Berger and his wife, Bessie, proprietors of the delicatessen store, and Esther D'Alessandro, owner of the premises; William H. Brown and Frank Sher, proprietor and bartender of the Winnisimmet street saloon and Agnes and Mary Lechnicki who run the tobacco store and lunch room.

Prices for liquor are on a sliding scale. The stuff is all of the same quality but half pints retail at 40 and 50 cents, pints at 75 cents, the agents say in their sworn testimony, all according to the location. Individual drinks bring the same uniform price of 25 cents.

Agents Trembly and Wyllie have been working in Chelsea for the past ten days collecting evidence against the speak easies. Both of them say that they experienced no difficulty at all in being served with liquor.

MAN MURDERED IN BOOTLEG BATTLE

Milford, Dec. 19.—Edward A. O'Brien, a young man of this place, who was found dead in an automobile in the Mendon Woods, three miles from here, was murdered.

As a result of mysterious circumstances surrounding his death, an autopsy was performed which convinced the authorities O'Brien was hit by some blunt instrument which fractured his skull in two places.

The police believe O'Brien was a victim of a bootleggers' row, although they decline to say where the row took place.

First reports that O'Brien died of natural causes did not satisfy the police. They questioned John Flinn of Milford, in whose machine O'Brien traveled to North Smithfield. Flinn said the motor broke down on his way back to Milford and that he walked three miles into Milford to get aid.

He thought O'Brien was asleep and left him in the car. When he returned with a repair man, he said O'Brien was dead.

FILM STAR BANS CIGARETTES AS BEAUTY AID

THOSE WHO believe that smoking—even the daintiest maneuvering with a cigarette—or sipping cocktails, or anything like that, adds to feminine charm, will immediately start an argument should they chance to meet Carmel Myers. ### PROTESTANTS AID FREE STATE LOAN

Dublin, Dec. 19.—A striking feature of the success of the $30,000,000 Free State loan is the warm cooperation which the Protestant churches in Ireland have given. The Teachers' Union, which has been in violent conflict with the government over the 10 per cent reduction in salaries, and has bitterly assailed the Free State cabinet, has voted to invest $75,000 of its funds in the loan.

Beauty Marred by Operation Scars, Sues Doctor

Paris, Dec. 18. — Another tragedy of a woman's fight to follow fashion's dictates and maintain the fashionable "flat profile," is revealed in the Seine Tribunal, where Huguette Lemaire, formerly well known beauty, has sued a surgeon for $20,000 damages.

She charges that the doctor's operations "to reduce plumpness in the region between the waist and the neck" resulted in scars which now deface her beauty.

KILLED WHILE TRYING TO END LIFE

Gloucester, Dec. 19. — An accidental fall over a forty-foot cliff killed Almon B. Waddell, hardware dearer of this city, while he was wandering aimlessly in Rockport planning to commit suicide.

Boys strolling along the beach near the Rockport Coast Guard Station came upon the body at the foot of a cliff, an occasional high wave washed over it.

For twenty hours, police of Gloucester and Rockport had been searching for Waddell.

After returning home from the movies with his wife, Waddell left his home at No. 5 Commonwealth avenue just in time to catch a late train for Rockport, his birthplace. His wife thought nothing of his leaving the house at that hour as he frequently went to a near-by restaurant for a midnight lunch.

After he had gone, Mrs. Waddell found a note from her husband addressed to her, in which he said he left her all his property.

He had been acting queerly for more than a month, and fearing that he contemplated suicide, Mrs. Waddell consulted with the police.

Waddell had evidently wandered about on the top of the cliff until he became exhausted, slipped, and fell over.

Men on duty at the Coast Guard station had noticed him earlier in the day, walking unsteadily down the road toward Land's End. They supposed he was intoxicated and paid little attention to him.

New Orleans, La., Dec. 19.—The City of Merida, capital of Yucatan, with a population of 100,000, was taken over by the rebels yesterday when General Lariga and the garrison declared for Huerta, it was announced today by the Mexican Consul-General here. Indications were that the port of Progreso would fall into rebel hands, it was added.

Mexico City, Dec. 19 (A.P.).—Press dispatches from Villa Hermosa, capital of the State of Tabasco, state that rebel forces commanded by Generals Carlos Green, ex-Governor of Tabasco; Fernando Segovia and Marcelino Lucero, which have been attacking Villa Hermosa for the past two days, have suffefred heavy losses in the bloodiest fighting of the present revolution.

The forces of Generals Segovia and Lucero are reported to have suffered 100 casualties inflicted by General Vicente Gonzalez, commanding federal forces within the city.

Rebels Claim Victory in Puebla Region

Vera Cruz, Dec. 19 (I.N.S.).—Revolutionary troops in the mountains of Puebla region have gained a great victory over the Federals, according to announcement by Huertista headquarters.

The Federals were forced to retreat, leaving 120 dead and many wounded.

Federal forces numbering 4,000 under General Eugenio Martinez, at Apizaco, on the Mexicano Railway, were attacked by a small force of Revolutionary troops, commanded by General Pedro Gonzalez.

After a battle of several hours, the Huertistas retired from San Marcos. Later they were reinforced.

Chief of Staff General Marcial Cavazos of the Federal army was among the killed.

The revolutionary losses were put at twenty-six dead and ninety-seven wounded.

General Eugenio Martinez, who commanded the Federals at San Marcos, was in telegraphic communication with Adolfo de la Huerta and it was reported, might desert President Obregon.

Colonel Crispen Samano, chief of staff to General Figueroa, in the State of Guerrero, telegraphed from Acapulco that forces are being concentrated for an attack against the Federals.

SLEW MAN WHO TAUGHT WIFE LOVE SONG

Lancaster, N. H., Dec. 19. — "I Love You, But I Can't Have You."

This old-time love song was taught to Mrs. Thomas G. Sheridan of Berlin by Felix Croteau, with whose murder Sheridan is charged, according to Attorney Frank Blais in opening the defence at the trial of Sheridan, now in progress.

As evidence that Croteau even had wrecked the Sheridan home, Attorney Bliss told the jury that Mrs. Sheridan had sung the song almost continuously. It is evident from the opening address by counsel for the defence that the "unwritten law" will be the basis for the defence.

JEALOUSY CHARGED.

Sheridan is charged by the State with having threatened Croteau's life because of jealousy. He is further charged with ordering Croteau from his home on August 4, and then following him and shooting him to death.

Sheridan and his young wife sat together while Attorney Blais outlined the defense.

Sheridan and Croteau had been friends and finally Croteau went to the Sheridan home to board. As time passed, Sheridan began to detect love glances between his wife and the boarder, Attorney Blais told the court.

THREAT ADMITTED.

Growing distrust in his friend and wife was strengthened by the gossip of neighbors, but Sheridan never threatened to kill Croteau, only to scare him, the attorney said.

Mrs. Leah Bouchard, a neighbor, testified that she had observed friendship between Mr. Sheridan and Croteau. She testified to having seen a child take a note from Mrs Sheridan to Croteau. She admitted she had quarrelled with Mrs. Sheridan and that the latter had accused her of flirting.

The night of the slaying, Sheridan said, he had gone to bed when he heard voices. He rushed downstairs, picked up a revolver and went outside. Then he went into a "sort of a daze" and the next thing he remembered he was kneeling over his former friend's body, bathing two bullet wounds.

BEQUEATHS ALTARS IN PRIEST'S MEMORY

The will of Joanna M. Cogliam, late of Quincy, was filed in the Norfolk Probate Registry at Dedham. She provides that a trust fund be created with the Exchange Trust Company of Boston as trustee, for the purpose of purchasing and erecting in the proposed new Roman Catholic Church in the parish of the Sacred Heart in Atlantic, and elsewhere else, three altars as a tribute to her brother, the late Rev. Thomas J. Coghlan, a former pastor of the parish.

KING AND QUEEN OF GREECE ARE BOUND FOR ROUMANIA

Athens, Dec. 19 (Universal Cable).—King George and Queen Elizabeth have left Greece on the yacht Eppria, bound for Roumania.

London, Dec. 19.—It is learned that several telegrams have been sent by the British Foreign Office to the legation at Athens to use every endeavor to secure the safety of the royal family.

Former Premier Venizelos, who was urged by King George to return to Greece, intends to stay in Paris, in view of developments.

Premier Poincare, according to foreign office information, has definitely declined the appeals of the Serbian and Roumanian monarchs to intervene in behalf of the Greek dynasty.

DRIVES WIFE OUT, ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

Worcester, Dec. 19.—Driving his wife, scantily clad, from the home, John R. Mullaney, twenty-seven years old, of No. 295 Chandler street, attempted suicide by drinking a disinfectant, but will recover because of the prompt use by a police emergency crew of a stomach pump and emetics. Mullaney had been drinking heavily and came home intoxicated, his wife said.

HELD AS SHOPLIFTER, WOMAN SAYS PILLS DRUGGED HER

Pills obtained in a Washington, D. C., drug store are blamed by Mrs. Helen Overman, thirty-five years old, of Bristol, Tenn., for her predicament of being in custody, charged with shoplifting in a downtown store. Mrs. Overman, the police say, took articles valued at $75. They further say that, when arrested, she had a waist stuffed under each armpit.

Her story is that she came North to Boston with her husband who was to consult an eye specialist. She registered at a Back Bay hotel and later took a room in Brookline, she says.

Florence Lee Bride Today of Major Grey-Edwards, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

POPULAR Mrs. Harry Pratt McKean, Jr., gave a tin shower the other evening for her artistically-inclined sister, Miss Florence Lee, whose marriage to Major H. B. R. Grey-Edwards of London takes place today.

Nearly fifty members of the North Shore's Winter colony gathered for the shower at "Willow Tree Farm," the McKean place at Beverly Farms. The prospective groom, by the way, has made a very favorable impression upon the friends of his bride.

The fact that the wedding of Miss Lee and Major Grey-Edwards is to be extremely small and quiet, has in no way detracted from the considerable interest in the affair. For the bride's family—she is the daughter of the George Lees of Beverly Farms—are among the most prominent along the shore.

Only the immediate members of the family will be present when the tall and dark-haired Florence Lee promises to "love, honor and obey" her English major. The ceremony will be solemnized at the Lee estate in the Farms, and shortly after the couple will leave for abroad. They are, I believe, to make their home in London.

TODAY'S ceremony means that Mr. and Mrs. Lee will be left alone on their place. The only son, Harry Lee, just recently married charming Mrs. Frances LeMoyne Stevenson, and the three daughters all left the parental nest some time ago. The former Marie Lee was for several years Mrs. Oliver Turner and is now the wife of Huntington W. Frothingham. Margery Lee Sargent remained a widow for a number of years following the tragic death of her young husband, Francis Sargent, and two years ago became Mrs. Arthur Adams, while the one-time Bessie Lee seems to be entirely contented with her past and present spouse, Harry Pratt McKean.

Copley-Plaza, for tonight comes the first junior supper dance of the season.

Needless to say, Miss Debutante will don her most fascinating frock for the occasion. The junior supper dances, which are primarily for the buds and girls who've been out a season or two, are quite as smart and exclusive as the senior supper dances. The former have been held only a few seasons, but they seem to have won for themselves a permanent red-letter place on the season's calendar.

'HELPING HAND' OF AMERICAN AIDS MOTHER

It's a lift over the rough spots in the road that remind us the world is still a decent place to live in.

The American's Helping Hand has given many such a lift and there was never one more appreciated than Mary Cincotta's.

Four weeks ago Mary's husband disappeared and left her destitute. There are two little boys to support and preparations to be made for a new arrival near Christmas time. Things have gone hard for the small family. There was no food, no clothing for the babies, nothing for the new child soon to join them and Mary herself is unable to work.

Yesterday Mary came to the Helping Hand and asked for a lift over this hard stretch.

"As soon as I am well again I won't need help because I will be able to get work."

The baby has been fed on coffee as there was no milk. The big boy of three years ate two meals a day and never asked for more because he knew there was no more. Mary ate coffee and bread.

The shabby purse that Mrs. Cincotta carried with her to the American office held four pennies.

"Please help me," she begged.

She found help. Food has been given to her so her baby can have milk to drink instead of coffee, and a generous woman is giving some clothes for the two little boys. The dreary Christmas that Mary expected will be changed into the same "Merry Christmas" that everyone wishes to everyone else.

DEMANDS ARMY AND NAVY AID IN DRY ENFORCEMENT

Dallas, Tex., Dec. 19.—Both the military and naval forces should be employed in the enforcement of prohibition laws, Pat M. Neff, Governor of Texas, declared at a mass meeting here, sponsored by the Dallas Pastors' Association.

The meeting adopted a resolution endorsing the formation of a local organization of pastors and church laymen to assist in the enforcement of the law.

"No ship that carries outlaw liquor should be allowed in an American harbor," asserted Governor Neff.

"Let the battleships that are in our harbors go out over the three-mile limit and sweep the seas free of the rum ships," he said.

XMAS CLUBS TO PAY EARLIER NEXT YEAR

Boston banks will distribute their Christmas Club checks two weeks earlier next year.

Instead of December 31, or December 15, the present date of distribution, Christmas Savings Club members will receive their checks on the first of December next year.

Last minute pressure on department store salespeople, postal clerks and on others affected by heavy purchasing during the last week of Christmas shopping, prompted Boston merchants to appeal to the Retail Trade Board of the Chamber of Commerce for aid with the result that local bankers have agreed to change the yearly schedule by two weeks.

CLUBS UNDER WAY.

Instead of a two or three weeks' interval between saving, Boston Christmas Club members will begin immediately on their fifty-week saving period.

"Dissatisfaction on the part of the public, the merchants and the postal authorities with the concentrated rush for Christmas purchases during the last week preceding Christmas, has made necessary some sort of change," says Daniel Bloomfield, director of research of the Retail Trade Board.

"It is necessary that more money be placed in circulation earlier so that spending will be more divided during the pre-Christmas shopping period.

FRANTIC CONFUSION.

"Under the usual conditions, a large amount of money is released just a week or ten days before Christmas and frantic confusion has resulted.

"The public does not get a good assortment of merchandise, but must accept goods that has been handled and picked over. The clerks are inundated with last-minute demands and the postal forces must work late into the night to handle the flood of parcels that might have been taken care of weeks before."

The growth of Christmas Club savings is reflected in the greater volume of business noted by Boston merchants during the past few years. The large department stores, through their executives, declared today that this year's business promised to eclipse last year's by a large difference.

WEDDING BELLS ON LINER LEVIATHAN

Aboard U. S. S. Leviathan, en route to New York, Dec. 19 (Universal Wireless.)—A small white flag hoisted at the foremast of the Leviathan indicates that this great liner has become a "honeymoon ship."

The formality of hoisting the honeymoon flag followed the wedding aboard of Fraulein Wall Von Kahlden, of Berlin, and Earle L. Askam, formerly an army officer with the Rhine occupational forces. Askam's home is San Francisco.

Captain Hartley of the Leviathan officiated in the commander's office aft. John J. McGraw, famous baseball magnate who is returning with Hughie Jennings, from a baseball business trip to Europe, gave the bride away.

FAMOUS LAWSON RUBY ON MARKET

The most perfect ruby in America, known to society as the "Lord Ruby," is now on the market. It is valued at $15,000, weighs 6.74 carats and was purchased by Thomas W. Lawson at the height of his success. He called it his "Spirit of Success" and presented it to his wife. Red rubies were the talisman of Lawson's prosperity, so he firmly believed.

When Mrs. Lawson died, the ring was bequeathed to her daughter, Dorothy, who has now placed it on the market.

Hides Wife's Ashes in Concrete of New Cathedral

Washington, Dec. 19.—Secure in the foundation of the nave of the Episcopal Church's great National cathedral here, August Almquist hid the ashes of his wife.

He alone can say just where reposed the urn. And there it will remain until time and the centuries conquer the enduring stone.

Before the death of his wife, many years ago, she secured from the builder a promise that she would not be buried in a place where the grave would be corrupted.

He and her body cremated and kept the urn in his home. After years of waiting his chance came. Visiting the cathedral at night, he placed the urn so that it would be imbedded deep in the concrete.

HOW PINKERTON GOT MEN WITH ANNA HELD'S $500,000 GEMS

By AUSTIN O'MALLEY

The late William A. Pinkerton affected to laugh at the "psychological detective" of fiction, but in real life was one of the first American detectives to apply practical psychology in his daily work. This psychology he called "knowing human nature."

In the following story is told how Mr. Pinkerton, without even a scrap of proof at his disposal, forced four of the cleverest thieves the United States has known to disgorge the proceeds of a $500,000 jewel theft, forcing them to be content with a meager reward offered by the owner.

A tall, powerfully built man, his hair iron gray, sat in the lobby of the old Stratford Hotel some twenty years ago, chatting with acquaintances. It was just before the theater hour.

While he was thus engaged a beautiful woman stepped from the elevator. Her magnificent gown was fairly ablaze with costly jewels. As she advanced smilingly toward the gray-haired man she was greeted with a frown.

"Lillian, how many times have I told you not to wear all that jewelry," said Billy Pinkerton.

"Why don't you put all your real jewelry in a vault and go down to the 5 and 10 cent store and buy a lot of imitations? They'll answer your purpose just as well and, sooner or later, if you won't safeguard those jewels, you're going to lose them."

"Oh, Billy, do you think so?" was the reply. "I've never lost any of them yet, but I'll be more careful."

"Tell me," said Mr. Pinkerton, "haven't you noticed a couple of window washers here in the hotel who seem to take particular care with the windows in your suite?"

"Of course not. I'd never see window washers, anyway. But I'll ask my maid."

The maid, summoned to the lobby, readily told of two men who had washed the windows of the suite at least twice a day ever since she and her mistress had been in the hotel.

Next day Lillian Russell and her maid visited the offices of the Pinkerton Detective Agency and from a score of photos picked out the pictures of Billy Burke, alias "The Chicago Kid," and Jack Arthur, alias "Boston Jack," as the overindustrious window washers.

A week later, speeding east in a luxurious Pullman were the principals of a musical comedy which had just completed a long, successful engagement at a Chicago theatre. In a compartment at the front were the prima donna of the show, the famous Anna Held, just recently from her native Paris, and her manager-husband, Florenz Ziegfeld.

As the train left Chicago a white-jacketed waiter walked through the car calling dinner.

Most of the theatrical folk quickly responded, but Miss Held and Mr. Ziegfeld remained for a while in their compartment.

At the second call of the waiter Miss Held and her husband leisurely made their way back toward the diner. Before they left, however, Miss Held turned to her maid and said in French:

"Lock the door of the compartment as soon as we go out and don't open it to anyone."

Mr. Ziegfeld said:

"Be sure to keep an eye on that black bag."

The maid nodded her head emphatically. The warning to take good care of that black bag was not to be lightly disregarded, she knew.

Trip to the Smoker

Hardly had Mr. Ziegfeld and his bride passed out of the car than the third business man, a slim, wiry little fellow, started toward the smoker. Behind him walked the fourth man, a tall, broad shouldered fellow, absorbed in a newspaper he held before him as he walked down the aisle.

Simultaneously, a man wearing a Pullman conductor's cap and uniform emerged from the smoking compartment where he apparently had been sitting for some time. As he passed the Ziegfeld compartment, he banged at the door.

"Pullman tickets, please," he said to the maid as she opened the door a trifle.

The maid, fresh from France, did not understand.

"Tickets please," the conductor repeated, a trifle impatiently.

Then he motioned her forward.

The girl comprehended his gesture. And with the typical Parisian peasant's awe of a uniform, she did not hesitate about obeying.

As she left the compartment, however, she turned the key in the door.

Next morning when the train pulled into the station at Cleveland Mr. Ziegfeld, Miss Held and the members of their company hurried to their hotels. The four business men had left the train at an earlier stop.

The hotel reached, Mr. Ziegfeld asked the clerk to check the bag containing his wife's jewelry in the hotel safe.

The clerk asked its value.

"About $500,000—all my wife's jewelry"—Mr. Ziegfeld replied.

"Better have a look at it to see it's O. K." returned the clerk.

Mr. Ziegfeld, complying with this formality, drew the key from his pocket and unlocked the bag.

Over the top of the opened bag was a piece of purple plush. Mr. Ziegfeld casually removed the piece of cloth, and then—

"We've been robbed!" he shouted. "This can't be my bag."

A telegram was quickly dispatched to the Pinkerton agency offering $20,000 reward for the return of the jewels.

Pinkerton's Mercy

A week later a tall, heavily built man, who might have been recognized as the assiduous reader of newspapers on the Ziegfeld compartment car, walked into the office of Seymour Beutler, New York manager of the Pinkerton agency.

"Hello, Jack," was Beutler's greeting. "Glad to see you looking so well."

"Hello," was the sullen response. "Tell me what this is all about, will you?"

"Oh, you know," was the reply. "You know 'The Eye' sent 'The Chicago Kid' a telegram to report at once to your office. Well, the Kid didn't come, but I'm here to represent him. What do you want?"

"Nothing at all, Jack," was the reply. "Nothing in particular, that is. The boss just wanted to know how you and the Kid liked traveling."

"What do you mean?"

"Nothing, really, but where are you washing windows now?"

The big man started.

"What do you mean—washin' windows?" he said. "I don't know nothin' about washin' windows."

"Sure?"

"Why, sure I am. I never washed no windows."

"First time in my life I ever knew 'The Eye' to make a mistake in identity," mused Beutler, half aloud. "He would have sworn that you and the Chicago Kid were washing windows at the Stratford in Chicago a few weeks ago. Must be some guys that look a lot like you."

"Well, what of it?"

"Nothing at all. I'll just have to tell the boss that you don't know anything about jewelry and that you never washed windows. But you know the boss—he never admits he's mistaken and he's liable to frame something like this jewel theft on you fellows if he finds out about being mistaken about window washing."

"You know that Ziegfeld is offering $20,000 reward for that jewelry—with no questions asked. I thought, maybe, that——"

"Well, I don't know nothin' about that jewelry, so why ask me?"

"No reason at all. But even if you don't know anything about it, maybe you could help us find out. You know the fellows that took it will be a whole lot better off if they take the reward than if they try to sell the jewels."

"How's that?"

"Well, you know if they take the $20,000 they'll get it without any trouble and they won't have to worry about being bothered in the future. But if they don't—well, maybe 'The Eye' hasn't enough evidence to convict them right now. He knows who they are and if he's forced to, he'll get them in the end. Better think it over."

Matters were all at an impasse for some time. Finally Mr. Pinkerton summoned Boston Jack.

"You trust me, don't you?" was the question.

"Absolutely," was the quick response.

"Then turn over the jewelry to me and I'll see that the money is delivered to you in a day or so. You've got my word on that."

Boston Jack consented without a murmur.

That afternoon Mr. Ziegfeld was summoned to the Pinkerton offices.

"Get twenty $1,000 bills and put them in an envelope," Mr. Pinkerton ordered him. "Then, exactly at 3 o'clock this afternoon walk out the Michigan avenue entrance of the Stratford. A man with his coat turned up around his face will pass you. Hand him the envelope and he'll hand you a brass baggage check."

Wellesley College Girls Rush Home For Christmas

ELEANOR JUDD AND ALICE DILL

They're off—the Wellesley girls!

Hat boxes 'n' trunks 'n' bags an' those smart little sticks they carry, an' everything—

They've thrown the last text book of Mr. James' psychology into a corner, and they're off to put the only real authentic views on soul stuff—their own brand — into practice.

Drawing rooms and the "setin" kind all over New England and the less important States will be brightened up by an army of feminine intellectuals who really don't care whether he's intellectual or not—as long as he's good-looking.

Wellesley College is dead for Christmas—long live Wellesley!

An' above Miss Eleanor Judge and Miss Alice Dill of Waterbury, Ct., looking over the timetable.

Among some of the freshmen there is weeping and wailing for Dean Alice V. Waite has penned the luckless notes which read: "Your academic standing, young lady, prompts me to suggest that you take a good long vacation. Perhaps you will think it unwise not to return after the Christmas holidays."

Forget You're Young at $11 a Week, Mourns Girl

The Boston American today publishes the story of May White and her fight to live on a ten-dollar salary. It is another in the series of "Ten Dollar Bills" and "Ten Dollar Belles."

May White works in a big building.

"It's a big building and the offices are swell. The boss likes to work in a big car, and there are carpets on the floor, but we don't get paid enough to live on."

"I get $11 a week, and anybody who thinks he can live on that should go ahead and try it. I haven't tasted an ice cream soda for three months.

"Not than an ice cream soda is necessary in order to live, but it would taste mighty good for a change. Water and tea, which isn't much more than water colored, might look like a change, but what's the use?

"Three of us girls in the office live together. We pool our food money so we can get a square meal about twice a week. For breakfast we get toast and milk from the boarding house lady and we pay her seventy-five cents a week for it.

"Lunch we buy. A ten-cent sandwich and a five-cent drink. Dinner we fix at home. A can of soup can be thinned for three portions and a can of beans can be stretched for three.

"We are all about the same size, so we swap clothes. Sometimes we get invited out to a meal. It doesn't much matter what the fellow looks like. If he's good for a feed we welcom turn him down.

"One of the girls is going steady with a fellow and she borrows my one dress every once in while so she'll look as though she had a lot of clothes. I go to bed that evening.

"A little while ago I bought a new dress. We have to look neat in the office and a cheap dress doesn't look neat long no matter how good care you take of it. I paid $7.50 for the dress and it took my savings for a month.

"I pay carfare too. A dollar and twenty cents is about ten per cent of what I earn and have to walk it to the elevated.

"The room stands me $2.50. It is a nice room but if we took one near enough to the office so we could walk to work it would cost us much more. We work in a swell neighborhood even if we do live in a dump.

"Lately we've been going in the stores Saturday afternoons to look at what other people can afford to buy. It's like a string of choker beads but before I could get the dollar to buy them my neck would be so thin it would cut the string. There are girls in the office who have beads and earrings and a couple of fur coats. Believe me, when you're cold and you're none too well fed, and there a thousand things you'd like to have and can't get, there are times when you figure you only come this way once and if you take all you can get you aren't getting any too much. I almost don't blame the girls who toddle down the primrose path.

"When they have rummage sales we often go over and buy our gloves there or our pocketbooks. I've bought pretty good gloves for ten cents. I don't care any more whether somebody else has worn them.

"I bought a Japanese kimono there for a quarter, and it's the only speck of color I've owned since I've been on the job. We buy our underwear there, too, for almost nothing.

"When you're using your eyes all day over a desk you don't feel like sewing when you get home at night. All I want is to lie down and rest my back. Of course, if I could go to the movies or a play I wouldn't turn it down, not if my back broke.

"Gee, I've forgotten what a musical comedy is. If I went into a cafe where they dance I wouldn't know how to act. It's awful living this way. You forget you're young. You almost forget you're human!"

Of course May White is not her real name. The American will give name and address to anyone who is interested. Tomorrow the story of Margaret Hughes, another "Ten Dollar Belle," fighting to live on a Ten Dollar Bill.

FINANCIAL SIEGE IS RAISED

College Sisters Now Reap Benefit From Slash in Laundry Bills

Harvard "Romeos" can Romeo once more without fear.

Their most pressing problem —laundry bills— is solved.

The blue shirts, adopted by the Harvard Blue Shirts Club, has brought the millennium to the Harvard yard, stated the lines of worry on Harvard boys' brows, and has left them free to pursue unrestrained pursuit of their college studies.

C. L. Plaitt.

It's like this:

The question of laundry has always been a vital one to Harvard men. One clean shirt day at least, and often two, was needed by every Harvard man. Besides, a Radcliffe or Wellesley girl would never consent to be "rushed" by a Harvard man with a spoiled shirt.

SPENT $12,000 WEEKLY.

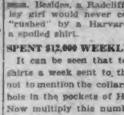
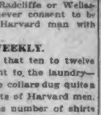
It can be seen that ten to twelve shirts a week sent to the laundry—not to mention the collars dug quite a hole in the pockets of Harvard men. Now multiply this number of shirts per student by 6,000, the number of students in the university, and the answer will be the weekly total sent to the laundry.

Multiply this total by 20 cents, the average cost of laundering a shirt, and you have the weekly laundry bill of Harvard University.



C. L. Jones.



M. R. Senius.

The result is staggering. Approximately $12,000 is spent weekly by Harvard students for laundering their shirts. Enough to feed almost 6,000 hungry and needy families of Boston on Christmas Day with Boston American Christmas Fund dinners!

BROKE! NO WONDER.

Is it any wonder that many Harvard men went "broke?"

That they were unable to entertain their Radcliffe, Sargent and Wellesley friends in a befitting manner?

The outcome was the Blue Shirts. The Harvard Blue Shirts is a club composed of Harvard men who wear blue shirts primarily to slash laundry prices, which, they declare, have become exorbitant, and also reduce the extravagant tendency manifested by Harvard men where shirts are concerned.

The experiment was a success. Laundry costs were slashed over nine-tenths, for where Harvard man used to wear ten shirts a week, they now wear one. The blue shirts don't show the dirt.

SWEEPING COLLEGE.

The organization has taken the college by storm. All Harvard is wearing the shirts. And now Harvard men cease to worry about their laundry bills.

Blue Shirts are seen at classes, at

W. Hamilton.

J. L. Corcoran.

dinners, at the Radcliffe and Wellesley dances, at club meetings. Everywhere.

By their blue shirts shall ye know 'em.

Leaders in the movement were Jack Purcell, 1926, Johnny Dewire, 1926, and William Hamilton, of the Graduate School.

Jack Purcell was the guiding spirit in the new movement of—fewer shirts—lower laundry bills."

"From a humble beginning of a few shirts in a Cambridge store, we have grown to the greatest organization in the college," declared this young genius on economics. "Our numbers are increasing daily. We now have hundreds of members greatly exceeding the enrollment in any club, organization or fraternity in the college."

ON TO PRINCETON.

Already the results of the new movement is being felt by the student laundries.

Will the movement spread?

"Yes," Purcell predicts. "As yet we have received no reports from Yale and Princeton, but we hope to have the organization national in scope. It ought to go big at Yale. Our colleges take notice."

Already the Blue Shirts appear to be an organization which will outrival the "Shifters," which swept the country two years ago.

Motorists, Beware Carbon Monoxide Gas in Garages

Washington, Dec. 19.—Motorists who "warm up" their engines in garages during the Winter months are warned by the Bureau of Mines to open all doors and windows to guard against poisonous carbon monoxide fumes.

Citing numerous cases of asphyxiation from this practice, the bureau's tests have shown the amount of carbon monoxide present in automobile exhaust gases varies from 2.4 to 9.5 per cent. and adds that 4-10 of 1 per cent. is sufficient to kill a person in one hour.

5 INDICTED IN TUCKER WEDDING

Boy and Bride, 49, Now in the South, Must Answer to Perjury Charge

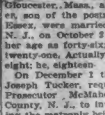
Jersey City, N. J., Dec. 19.—Mrs. Susan Simpson Tucker, forty-nine years old, Burton S. Tucker, seventeen, her bridegroom, and three other persons were indicted by the Hudson county Grand Jury on criminal charges growing out of the Tucker's wedding October 2 last. Mrs. Tucker was indicted on three separate charges.

The others indicted were John Muller, former justice of the peace of Hoboken; George H. Grebe, registrar of vital statistics of Union Hill, who issued the marriage license, and John L. McInnes of Gloucester, Mass., chum of the youthful bridegroom, who was witness.

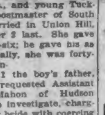
Mrs. Simpson, wealthy widow of Gloucester, Mass., and young Tucker, son of the postmaster of South Essex, were married in Union Hill, N. J., on October 2 last. She gave her age as forty-six; he gave his as twenty-one. Actually, she was forty-eight; he, eighteen.

On December 1 the boy's father, Joseph Tucker, requested Assistant Prosecutor McMahon of Hudson County, N. J., to investigate, charging the matronly bride with coercing his son into matrimony and kidnaping him when he latter ran away from her. The results of the prosecutio's investigation were presented to the Grand Jury.

Five indictments were presented



Burton Tucker



Mrs. Burton Tucker

to Judge Hyman Lazarus n county court here.

One indictment charged Mrs. Tucker with perjury, declaring she falsified concerning her age and residence in applying for the marriage license. Another indictment charged young Tucker with the same offense.

Mrs. Tucker, Muller and Grebe, were charged in another indictment with subornation of perjury, based on the cla m of the State that Mrs. Tucker, aided by Grebe and Muller, induced the boy to swear falsely about his age and residence.

A fourth indictment charged Grebe with violating the marriage law in issuing the marriage license before forty-eight hours, required by law after the filing of the application has elapsed.

The fifth indictment charged all five persons with a conspiracy to violate the New Jersey marriage law.

ACCUSED CAMBRIDGE COUNCILLOR AND WIFE

MR. AND MRS. W. H. HOGAN

Councillor Hogan is shown on his way to Middlesex Superior Criminal Court, East Cambridge, where he is on trial on the charge of having accepted a bribe.

HOGAN DENIES ON STAND HE TOOK BRIBE

City Councillor William H. Hogan of Cambridge, on trial in Middlesex Superior Criminal Court, charged with accepting a bribe of $300 from Abraham Hyde, through James R. Regan, took the stand in his own defense and denied that he had ever accepted a bribe from Hyde.

He admitted on direct examination that Hyde and Regan had come to him several times and had urged him to rush a permit for the removal of a Windsor street building. He said that Hyde had told him that the building was worth $5,000 and that if Hogan would get him the permit he would give $300. He said that the offer was made at his cottage at Nantasket about five days before the meeting of the Cambridge City Council. He said that he ordered him from his home when he attempted to bribe him.

Under crossexamination he said that he had threatened to expose Hyde to the City Council for attempting to offer him a bribe, but that Reagan had prevailed upon him not to because Reagan said he expected Hyde to take out an insurance policy through him.

Hogan said that the reason that he did not expose Hyde was that he thought that it would cause a Grand Jury investigation and that it would result in a great deal of trouble for all concerned. He said also that he would lose his job at the Veterans' Bureau.

Despite the grilling cross-examination by District Attorney Bushnell, Hogan could not be shaken in his direct testimony.

The case will be given to the jury some time today.

AUTO DEMOLISHED, HAS WRIST SPRAINED

Fred C. Bolwell, No. 21 Radcliffe road, Somerville, had a narrow escape from death, when a touring car he was driving was struck by a truck at Tremont street and Massachusetts avenue. His machine was demolished. Bolwell fell underneath the wreckage.

William Bridges, No. 12 Westminster avenue, Roxbury, driver of the truck, rushed Bolwell to the City Hospital. Upon examination by physicians however, the only injury Mr. Bolwell was found to be suffering from was a sprained left wrist.

UNDERWEAR PRICES TO JUMP 20 P. C.

New York, Dec. 18.—The recent upward turn of the cotton market will result in a twenty per cent. jump in the price of a heavy knit underwear manufactured for next fall, it was announced at a meeting of the ribbed group of the Associated Knit Underwear Manufacturers today.

EPISCOPAL REVOLT SPREADS

Presbyterian Camp Attacks "Articles of Faith"; Bishop Manning Warned

New York, Dec. 19.—Developments today in the Episcopal church controversy between Modernists and Fundamentalists were:

1—A flat threat by Episcopal Modernists that rectors accused of heresy will demand ecclesiastical trial or a retraction, failing which they will take recourse in courts of law—presumably in the form of damage suits.

2—A very evident reluctance on the part of Bishop Manning and other Fundamentalist leaders to proceed against rectors charged with heresy.

3—A terse warning to Bishop Manning by clergymen and laymen of his diocese that he must not attempt to curb the utterances of liberal rectors from the pulpit.

4—National opposition in the Presbyterian Church to the five articles of faith adopted last May by the Presbyterian Assembly.

5—Growing national agitation in the Baptist Church between Fundamentalists and Modernists.

MORGAN WITH LIBERALS.

Modernists today planned to carry their rebellion against the Fundamentalist teachings of the Protestant Episcopal Church into the stronghold of the Conservatives—the House of Bishops.

Further demands for a "showdown"—trial of at least 500 Episcopal clergymen, including Bishop William Lawrence of Massachusetts, as heretics—were voiced by the Modern Churchmen's Union.

The laity became embroiled in the dispute also. J. P. Morgan, George W. Wickersham, Mrs. Herbert Satterlee, a sister of Morgan; Mrs. Henry P. Davison, Judge Edward D. Finch and George Gordon Battle were among the most widely known Episcopalians said to be lined up behind the Modernist faction, who in sermons and statements have cast doubt on the Virgin birth of Christ.

Former Senator Chauncey M. Depew voiced the sentiment of the Fundamentalist group of laymen.

"I have lived nearly a century to see transcendentalism, Millerism and other isms come and go. This Modernism will pass as a fad," Depew

RECTORS SEEK FREEDOM.

Bishop Manning will not order Modernist Episcopal rectors tried for heresy, nor will he take steps to curb them in their statements, it was freely predicted by his intimates today.

Announcement of his attitude followed an earlier statement by the Rev. Stuart L. Tyson, Episcopal rector and vice-president of the Modern Churchmen's Union, in which he declared the liberal ministers were determined that they would have freedom of expression and belief in the church, and would fight for it.

PRESBYTERIAN MOVE.

An organization in the Presbyterian Church similar to the Modern Churchmen's Union, preparing, with national support, to offset an attempt of Presbyterian Fundamentalists to drive out all Modernists from that church, was disclosed today by the Rev. William P. Merrill, pastor of the Brick Presbyterian Church.

Simultaneously, it became practically assured that the bishop coadjutor Moore of Dallas is about to abandon the charge of heresy against the Rev. Mr. Heaton, which caused the sudden marshalling of forces on both sides in the dispute.

5000 LOAVES OF BOND BREAD DONATED FOR XMAS BASKETS

ANOTHER GENEROUS GIFT IS 5000 CHOCOLATE BARS

Two fine contributions of food have been made to the American's Helping Hand Christmas Basket Fund. These articles will be packed in the parcels which the American has already ordered.

The gifts include 5,000 loaves of crisp, nutty-flavored Bond bread and 5,000 bars of Toblerone Swiss milk chocolate. These contributions, worth hundreds of dollars, will materially assist in making the Christmas dinners which are to be given to the needy of Greater Boston something to be remembered for many weeks.

Bond bread is without question one of the most healthful foods on the market today. Its manufacturers have kept faith with the public in continuing to produce the best bread possible. Nothing but the finest ingredients are used in its manufacture.

INGREDIENTS WEIGHED.

This bread never varies, as every article that goes into its manufacture is carefully weighed, with precision. Every ounce of flour, milk, sugar, lard and yeast that goes into each batch of bread is measured so that exact results may be accomplished. The expert mixers of the company are more careful in this respect than the average housewife.

Human hands never touch the bread from the time the flour is weighed until the crisp, brown loaves appear wrapped and sealed in glazed, germ-proof paper, ready for delivery.

The Basket Fund director is confident these big loaves will be fully appreciated by the thousands of impoverished persons to whom they will be given on Christmas Day.

Those who receive a Christmas basket next week will have an additional delight in store for them through the kindness of The Tobler Swiss Chocolate House. This firm, with factories in Switzerland and offices in Boston, has donated 5,000 Toblerone bars of chocolate.

PARTY TOMORROW NIGHT.

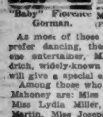
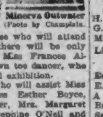
Miss M. Dorothy Mahoney of Marina road, South Boston, reports a heavy sale of tickets for her entertainment and dance in Lerner's Ballroom De Luxe, No. 825 Massachusetts avenue, Back Bay, tomorrow night. Mr. Lerner is giving free use of his dance hall for the occasion.



"Baby" Florence Gorman.



Minerva Outwater (Photo by Chandler).

As most of those who will attend prefer dancing, there will be only one entertainer, Miss Frances Aldrich, widely-known toe dancer, who will give a special exhibition.

Among those who will assist Miss Mahoney are: Miss Esther Boyce, Miss Lydia Miller, Mrs. Margaret Martin, Miss Josephine O'Neil and Miss Elizabeth Curran.

NORFOLK DOWNS DANCE.

Miss Minerva Outwater of Norfolk Downs expects a large attendance at her entertainment in Francis W. Parker School, that district, Friday night. She has arranged an attractive program in which the following pupils of her studio will appear: Peggy Morse, Edith Sharp, Elinore Tisdale, Barbara Churchill, Flora Hanly, Barbara Gelligan, Clifford Handy, Betty Lamont, Irving Lamont, Nathalie Shagrue, Alice Hennessey, Thelma Lyons, Minerva Outwater and Ruth Grady.

Others who will assist in making the party a success are the following pupils of Miss Myrna E. Chamberlain, principal of Wellaston School of the Spoken Word: Juanita Bartlett, Rhoda Stuart, Alice Shawcross, Myerna Reid Hersey, Barbara Shawcross, Helene Johnson, Florence Gorman, Clare Riley, Phyllis Mollison, Angeline Gorman, "Baby" Ruth Woods, Rosemary Riley and Julia Lydon. Norfolk orchestra will furnish music.

SHRINE GIVES $350.

"We like kiddies" was the explanation of Walter Morrison, potentate of Aleppo Temple, Mystic Shrine, in presenting a check for $350 to the Basket Fund.

Another substantial amount was turned into the Fund by Gertrude Dolan-DePetre of Roxbury, who has aided in many ways. Her last contribution was a check for $75, the profit from a children's entertainment conducted by her in Eagle Theatre, Roxbury, last Saturday morning.

Ralph W. Taylor presented a check for $75 to the fund, the net proceeds from an entertainment in his School for Stage Arts at No. 20 Huntington avenue, in which his talented pupils took part.

Miss Marie Deouth

Ruth Grady.

The Copley-Plaza Hotel Charity Ball was an overwhelming success. Additional returns have been received, making a net profit of $1,414. This season's ball was the most successful financially of any ever conducted in behalf of the fund.

The Santa Claus Mongrel tag day in aid of the fund was a huge success. Additional returns bring the total for tag day up to $348.72. More will be added.

NEWS OF THE DANCE HALLS

Ever since the pre-historic gallant waved his stone hatchet at some fair and prospective partner an invitation to the tribal cotillion, the Goddess Terpsichore has deemed that her own special hobby should play rather a large part in human recreation and amusement—and her mandates have been followed.

No matter the steps! Let race and epoch decide these. There is necessary only a rhythmical movement of the feet—then one is dancing. The dance does not even make any stipulation for the tempo. Rhythm alone is the key, evolving throughout the centuries from the time when the nimble-footed cave man stamped the hardened earth to the steady beat of the skin drum until the present-day flapper bunches her shoulders and portrays a Gilda Gray replica to the wail of the saxaphone and the bleat of the clarinet.

HEALTHFUL EXERCISE.

Primarily, dancing is one of the most healthful forms of exercise known to man. All the reputed physical culturists recommend it as an admirable method of building up the body to a more perfect posture and poise—a method open to both the old and the young. Physicians strongly advise it. To dance is to but yield to one of the fundamental human impulses.

Furthermore, many splendid opportunities for those living in Greater Boston to indulge in this form of recreation are in evidence. There are a great number of splendid ball rooms, exceptionally conducted and well-managed, where one is able to go and enjoy excellent music and an environment of refinement, where there are beautiful decorations and pleasing, new lighting effects, and above all, where there is a good floor upon which only approved dancing is permitted.

THE CHATEAU.

The Chateau Ball Room, located on Huntington avenue and adjoining the Boston Opera House, is unusual from the fact that it was one of the first places in Boston to inaugurate the custom of "couple only admitted," H. E. McDevitt's own idea, which has been an unqualified success. The decorations are in good taste, the music excellent, featuring Bert Lowe's orchestra, and the exclusive environment that of a private instead of a public ball room.

CRESCENT GARDENS.

The Crescent Gardens Ball Room at Revere is one of the most magnificent public ball rooms in New England. Accommodating 2,500 persons, this structure represents an investment of a half million dollars. A fifteen piece orchestra, comprising expert musicians and soloists, plays the latest dance music at all times. It is the policy of the Crescent Gardens Company to present unusual events. Special-night attractions and novelties are featured from time to time and the ball room is operated the year round.

ADAMS HOUSE

After forty years continued success the Adams House has inaugurated a "Dine, Dance, Dance and dine" before and after the theatre. The Mason street cafe is more than ever devoted to the Goddess Terpsichore. Theatre parties are invited to drop in and enjoy the excellent cuisine. Morey Pearl leads an orchestra that is up to date in every respect. Plans for special features during the holidays are announced.

HEALY'S FEATURES

Healy's finds itself in a most convenient situation on Washington street, opposite Boylston. An enjoyable evening is promised to those who wish to hear good music and dance upon a floor of splendid quality. Healy's will offer novelties in the cabaret line during the Christmas and New Year period.

ELKS BALLROOM

For those residing in Cambridge and the near vicinity, the Elk's Ball Room in Central square offers a delightful evening. The hall is spacious, giving forth an atmosphere of refined enjoyment. Anybody across the Charles who feels they've got a lot of cares and troubles on their hands can find relief at the Elks some evening.

STATE BALLROOM.

Dancers living near the Fenway find themselves pulled towards the State Ball Room on Massachusetts avenue. There the spirit is one of general good fun, healthful and approved. There also is a large and unusually good floor at one end of which is a sizable orchestra playing all there is that's new in the form of popular music.

ROSE T MANAGERS ATTEND BANQUET

Seventy-one store managers and their assistants attended the annual Rose T. Grocery Company's banquet in a Federal street cafe.

Mr. Edward Rose, president, and F. L. Parsloe, general manager of the company's seventy-one stores in Greater Boston, were the speakers.

Mr. Rose spoke on his ambition to have 100 Rose T. stores, and Mr. Parsloe on the business organization of the stores.

GAS STOVE IGNITES CLOTHES, WOMAN DIES

Miss Mary A. Leonard, forty-five years old, No. 100 Farrington street, Wollaston, died at the Quincy Hospital from burns suffered when her clothing caught fire from a gas stove in her home.

Francis J. Leonard, a brother of the dead woman, was severely burned about the hands in smothering the flames which enveloped his sister. His burns are not considered dangerous.

PRISCILLA PRICE FINDS THE HANDICRAFT OF THE 500

Today we strolled around and about the little shops. One pretty shop has the work of skilful fingers assembled for your convenience. What a colony these people would make if their homes were on the Common near their shop!

Painted napkin rings of wood, Br'er Rabbit, in his coat of pink, a saucy grey squirrel in a blue jacket, or a bold tom cat with his jolly red tie, each priced at 65c. Or for 50c Chicken Little in yellow or blue will hold your napkin.

The hand-made jewelry is of course more expensive. But these artists have fashioned such things as a pottery plaque for a teapot or hot dish, a romantic white sailing ship on a sea of blue, for $2.00. Or hand painted tin salt and pepper sets, with tiny sprays of holly, $1.25 the pair. For a lady's desk, a round wooden holder, black, with festoons of gay flowers in pretty colors, inside it a removable glass inkwell, $2.00. Or hand decorated Christmas cards, some for as little as 25c.

For the book lover there are delightful markers; narrow strips of leather, on the end of which is a black painted spade, or club, of wood; for the more venturesome, there is the score-winning heart or diamond, painted red—each marker, 50c.

If you want to spend more money, you will find such things as lamps, book ends, hand wrought silver and a score of other beautiful and useful articles, all made at home by these workers, and sold on commission by the people who manage the shop.

Isn't it pleasant to think that people who have the talent for making beautiful things have a market for them, at a fair profit, and do not have to wait wearily for buyers to come direct to them.

QUERIES ABOUT IMPORTANT SUPER CONNECTIONS ANSWERED

PLAN FOR CHANGING PANEL

Questions About Blueprints and Bypass Condensers Also Answered

This is the thirteenth in the new Supersonodyne series which started December 5. The present article is written to answer several groups of questions sent in.

By M. A. SIMMONS,
Inventor of the Supersonodyne.

One of the most persistent questions that comes in about the Super is regarding the leads of the secondary of the second Simmons coil. Many seem perplexed to discover whether the feedback is to the positive or negative filament of the detector tube.

The upper end of the secondary connects first with the rotor binding post of the condenser, and thence to the positive filament of the detector tube. This is the same with Baby Super, the super Jector and that of the Super. The lower end of the secondary connects with the grid of the detector tube, through the grid condenser grid leak unit.

The first Simmons transformer secondary is connected to the grid of the detector tube, through the grid condenser grid leak unit.

TWO BYPASS CONDENSERS.

The bypass condensers seem also to have given some trouble. There are two, each made up of two Dubilier .006 mfd postage stamp variety, bolted together, in parallel, to make up the radio frequency bypass, and is connected from the primary end of the second Simmons transformer to the ground.

The other end of the primary is connected to the ground.

The other end of the primary is connected to the ground.

Many inquiries have been made as to a complete set of blueprints for the Super. Such complete blueprints have been made, but are not available at present. They will be published in the near future. The American office, confusion of the present series, if sufficient demand develops. In the meantime, all the series, with full size diagrams and panel layouts.

These blueprint panel layouts will be exact size, printed in white on blue paper and in this sense "Blue prints." We will be able to tell more about this soon.

CORRECTION PLAN

What will I do" write another lot of subscribers. "I bought my panel and drilled it for Cardwell condensers, and had to buy Sc-Ard-Jet condensers, and they won't fit the older holes. In that case the simplest way to do is to get a piece of thin bakelite or hard rubber and, using the panel as a template, drill this piece of panel for fastening. CORRECT CONNECTIONS FOR BRIDGING CONDENSER IN REGENERATIVE CIRCUIT

THIS CONDENSER MAY HELP A LITTLE.

THIS PHONE CONDENSER IS USELESS IN THIS POSITION ON TUBE SET

DIAGRAM SHOWS HOW TO CONNECT CONDENSER

PUT CONDENSER ACROSS PHONES AND B BATTERY

It is general practice to insert a condenser in the crystal set so that it shunts the phones, which may be some slight assistance to a set of this kind, but it is hard to detect the difference.

This fixing phone condenser has been carried farther, and is used in the same manner in sets using a vacuum tube. Nine out of ten home made sets have this condenser, which is both a waste of time and money. It does no good at all.

On the other hand, we can take this same condenser and make it into what is called a "bridging condenser," and put it from the upper terminals of the transformer, clear across both phones and B battery. When we do this we start to do some good. This will help B control of oscillation and in some cases it will considerably improve reception.

TRY A VARIABLE.

While a fixed condenser may be used for this purpose, it is generally conceded that a 23-plate variable condenser is far better. Try it sometime and see for yourself.

In all cases, this condenser should be of most rugged construction, and before you put it in the circuit make absolutely certain that it is not short circuited.

Pick out the best condenser you have and use it for this purpose. If it gets short circuited you will put your B battery voltage through your phones, using up the battery in a hurry and probably burning out the phones.

IMPROVES RECEPTION

By properly controlling this condenser, it will be found to materially improve the reception on almost any tube set, as it possibly some of the freaks. On the vacuumeter, the grid and condenser set, as well as the two variometer and coupler sets, it will be found to be of some assistance, but in these it may not result in where it does.

This condenser was used back in the days when the three Bakerscomb coil set first came into being. It was considered an absolute necessity then, but has since dropped into disuse. It is used in order to get the finest quality and control of the tuned circuits, if you can get it to happen to hit the right capacity, you may use a fixed condenser for this purpose, but it is seldom that you have the proper capacity to do so. Try it and see for yourself.

Tomorrow we will answer more questions.

The Listener

Have you noticed how the cold man makes local stations of about 250 meters? Saturday and Sunday afternoon at 3:30 WJZ broadcasted in on the old four-tube receiver with volume that made it seem like WNAC. And in the late evening, WOW! How they did come in. Better and louder than if batteries you have been using all Summer, buy yourselves new ones and hear what it is like. West is saying these snappy nights.

Mention must be accorded to Lawrence Gumby, who has given the Davis general manager of the United Fruit Company, a rising vote of thanks for asking his company's powerful shore station, the Tropical Radio, to lay off the "stonecrusher" during broadcast hours. And there was no "blah" about it either. It just happened that we noticed WBP was not audible until 11 p. m., when it came in with a long accumulation of it. She happened a couple of nights and had to be looked into. Then reluctantly Mr. Davis admitted he had issued orders. And the Tropical Radio is an independent, struggling against the powerful radio trust, as embodied in the Radio Corporation of America. This Voluntary concession to the "CL's may cost them traffic, too. By the way, have you dropped Mr. Davis a note, yet, expressing your personal thanks. Well, get busy!

While your pen is in hand, drop Jean Shepard, 3d at WNAC, a note, telling him how much better WNAC comes through without the sawmill accompaniment. His station is all right as soon as WLD gets its new shore station and the new studio, so that no extraneous noises wander into the microphone.

Those who didn't hear Robert E Sherwood's little sketch, "Ten Twenty Thirty," from WEAF the other night, missed something. It's humor isn't the humor of he Broad Street Bunch and Spirado, but delightful for hearing him that I'd laugh at a rendition by him of Hamlet's w. k. monologue, just to show him he had no support. And now I'd like to hear his friend Robert C Benchley do his "treasurer's report."

• • •

I guess radio still has a few barbers to break down, after I take a look at the publicity sheet which comes from WJZ a day-to-day. It seems as though the station is about to be linked permanently with Boston by a special lan wire, and in touting the idea they admit "Boston is also acknowledged as the cultural centre of the country." Well, I ask you, Eddie, what do you know about that? I ask you.

'Ops' Held Off During Fight; Proves It Can Be Done

Several commercial ops have written in sternly chiding us for our complaints against "code" interference to radio broadcasting.

Messages must be sent, they say, and if there is too much QRM in the air, then they must be sent on other meters.

In reply, the Boston American would like to know why there was almost no code interference during the broadcasting of the Dundee-Bernstein fight.

For six nights, a special operator, of considerable commercial experience has been listening in at the Boston American monitor station and reporting code interference.

This interference has been heavy last night until the Dundee-Bernstein fight, when it dropped suddenly to almost zero.

"Looks as though the ops up and down the coast are real fight fans," observes the American listener.

It is possible to hold off for the broadcasting of radio fights without it not possible to hold off for at least three hours every evening during the broadcasting of other things?

LOG FOR DEC. 17.

9:25—KOZM steamer Miskinora, calling WSA, Independent Wireless Station at East Hampton. Sends a message.

9:37—KOZM sends a service message to WSA.

9:48—WIM, Radio Corporation station at Chatham, Mass., accepts a message from KDSI, American steamer Swift Wind, on 450 meters.

9:55—WIM having a dispute with KDSI as to the correct number of words in this message.

9:16—KEDN, American steamship Baracoa (Independent Wireless operators, calling WSA. Sends him a message

9:20—KEDN finishes message to WSA. He repeats each word twice, and fails all over himself in futile efforts to send legibly. The sea must be rough and his vessel pitching heavily enough to toss him all over the radio roof, or else he is a rotten operator. This type of interference shows poor judgment, and seems to be the kind of interference we get the most of.

9:22—CAVO, a Dutch ship, working with WCY, Cape May, N. J.

9:48—HLU, Spanish steamer Cabo Quantel, calling WSA.

9:50—HLU continues calling WSA at one-minute intervals at least eight times. This is a direct violation of the International Radiotelegraphic Convention regulations, which read: If a station which called does not reply when the call has been sent three times at intervals of two minutes, the call may not be resumed until after an interval of fifteen minutes.

9:55 to 10—Time signals received by K.

10:03—WJC, Aeolian Hall, New York, broadcasting the Dundee-Bernstein fight. There is very little code interference. Looks as though the "ops" up and down the coast are fight fans.

10:10—FTI, the French liner Chicago, calling WIM at Chatham, Mass. WIM working with WIM.

10:28—WIM, Radio Corporation station at Chatham, Mass., accepts a message from KDSI, American steamer Swift Wind, on 450 meters.

10:31—KEZ working with PJD, S. Martin Curacao.

10:32—DYO, a German ship, calls WIM and sends him a message.

10:34—KEZ calling PJD. Is trying to get message to him, but says he is having bad interference.

10:36—WCAE, Pittsburgh, broadcasting a jazz orchestra, but is being interfered with by some ship asking for a repeat of a message.

11:30—Off Watch.

A THREE DAYS COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Chronic Coughs and Persistent Colds Lead to Serious Lung Trouble. You Can Stop Them Now with Creomulsion, an Emulsified Creosote That Is Pleasant to Take.

Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action in soothing and healing the inflamed membranes and kills the germs.

Of all known drugs, Creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membrane and stop the irritation and inflammation while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after cold or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist, Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga.

WILSON A WINNER OVER McCARTHY IN THREE ROUNDS

VIRTUAL KNOCKOUT AS PAT HAD TO QUIT

By JACK CONWAY.

Johnny Wilson, unrecognized king of the middleweight division continued his mighty drive which will terminate with a victory over Harry Greb by whalloping over Pat McCartan of Roxbury in three rounds at the Armory A. A.'s show for the Hebrew American Charities Basket Fund at Mechanics Building.

Wilson greatest middleweight since the days of the Imperial planter [illegible] won after a fistic battle. A terrific right hand punch opened up a big gash under McCarthy's right eye and made it impossible for Pat to respond for the going in the fourth frame. A stoppage was forced from the Roxbury youth's corner as a token of defeat.

It was a hard, bitter battle while it lasted. Although Wilson had the advantage most of the time McCarthy made a [illegible] rally in the second session which [illegible] have one even round to his credit. In the third frame Wilson [illegible] Some hooking [illegible]

HARVARD HOCKEY TEAM OVERWHELMS BOSTON UNIVERSITY

CRIMSON SCORES EIGHT GOALS AGAINST ONE

A fast, aggressive forward line re-inforced by a seemingly inexhaustible reserve of substitutes enabled Harvard to trounce a scrappy B. U. ice hockey team in a rough battle at the Arena.

It was the same old story—a wealth of fine second-string material thrown in the battle at the psychological moment strengthened and freshened the Harvard attack and allowed it to literally overwhelm a tired B. U. aggregation.

The first period was a neck-to-neck affair, with B. U. hustling the Harvard first stringers all the way. At the close of the period the score was a 1 to 1 tie. Beale scored for Harvard on a nifty pass from Hodder, and Blake registered for B. U. on a shot from Almer, B. U. centre, which rebounded from the Crimson goalie's stick.

I'll sell you lot right on de bay."

HE tak' me to some ver' low ground,
Weet lots of clamshells lying round,
An' someting say to me inside,
"Don't go away before high tide."

DE agent laugh at clamshells near,
"Ha, ha, dey had wan chambaks here,"
And den hees talk for ver' long while,
An' I look on wen dumbbell style

HEES talk weet watair een hees eyes,
An' till hees speech weet heavy sighs,
Wen suddenly I look aroun'
An' fin' dat I mus' sweem or drown'

Come on and Help Out the Christmas Fund

BY GILL

The sporting department fund is away right over the top today.

Last year's figures were shattered and we are still going strong.

The Minot A. A. of Neponset was the first at bat with a contribution of $10 through its president, Albert Clark. This club is one of the youngest in the city, but is coming fast.

• • •

Jack "Twin" Sullivan, veteran of many battles, is still in the ring and going strong as usual. The professional never lets a Christmas go by without doing his bit for the kiddies and we missed him from among the early contributors this year, but the following note explains it all.

• • •

Please enclosed find $20 to help that good cause along. Hope you will have a big collection. At present I am laid up with a broken ankle and it will be a few weeks before I will be on deck again.

A Merry Christmas to everyone.

Yours truly

"PROFESSOR" JACK "TWIN" SULLIVAN.

May you soon be up and doing, Twin.

George C. Dempsey slipped in very quietly from his office at No. 687 Huntington avenue and left a check for $25. He probably don't want us to do this, but we cannot help but say a few words of praise for this charitable spirit. Thanks awfully Mr. Dempsey. Another champion.

William (Bill) Cuddy, former president of the A. A. U., always a good sport, kicked in with an ass usual.

James H. Vahey gave up his busy law practice long enough to write a check for ten.

• • •

All the way from New York C. T. Putnam mailed over ten. "Putt" is in charge of the American's New York office, but he never forgets his old friends in the Hub.

• • •

C. N. Jones, one of the busiest officials connected with the Merchants Co-operative Bank, held up a strenuous day's work to contribute five, while Menudihim, of Springfield, sent in three. Edward T. Curley came across with two and Jack Bloom contributed one.

The basketball fans who attended the game at Mechanics were on the job for $78.25, which more than helped out.

Today we are twenty-four hours nearer Christmas and we haven't nearly half enough in the sport fund. We beat last year, but we want to set a figure to aim at for next year. Come on, help out kick in.

NEE AND PARKER IN MATINEE GO AT LYNN

Terry Parker, of the North End former National amateur 126-pound champion, who has won twelve straight fights since entering the professional ranks, will get the acid test New Year's afternoon when he meets Tommy Nee, the pride of South Boston in the feature bout at the Club to A. C., Lynn.

Parker showed his mettle the night he won the National championship as he was obliged to defeat four opponents to get the title. He has shown th same qualities since turning pro and is considered the best prospect developed in New England in years.

Murphy Talked Himself Out of Being Kayoed

By TAD

You remember "Harlem Tommy" Murphy, with his big chin, don't you? Well, sir, Tommy is just as good looking as ever. We met him yesterday and he got all heated up over some of his old battles. He was speaking of knockdowns and their effect on a boxer and had to bust right out laughing himself when he remembered about the night he fought Johnny Frayne of Frisco in New Orleans.

"We were hardly warmed up," piped Tommy, "before that guy hit me on the chin and I bumped against the floor. I was up just as I heard the referee count 'eight,' and grabbed Frayne around the neck. I said to him: 'Johnny, when you get back home remember me to Jim Griffin and Jack Perkins and Toby Irwin and the boys, won't you?'

"Frayne didn't know whether I was getting ready to do business with him or not. I was so groggy I didn't know what I was talking about, and while Frayne was looking at me in wonderment I came to and late, on got right. After that first round the fight was mine. He almost had me, but didn't follow up his advantage."

BRITTON BEATS KAPLAN IN COMEBACK

New York, Dec. 19.—Jack Britton, former welterweight champion, staged a successful comeback here when he decisively outpointed K. O. Phil Kaplan, of New York, in a ten round bout at the Pioneer Club.

Kaplan never had a chance with the veteran ex-champion and was on the defensive through the fight.

Although Britton entered the ring weighing 150 pounds he appeared to have all his former swiftness. Kaplan tipped the beam at 143½ pounds.

SIKI PINCHED TRYING TO GIVE AWAY $700

New York, Dec. 19.—Dazzling Siki after he had insisted on giving away part of his roll of $700 at Weehawken, was arrested at the ferry landing, charged with being drunk and disorderly.

Today his manager bailed him out and started with him for his training quarters at Summit.

Siki, dressed in gaudy fashion highly perfumed, a monocle suspended from a black silk cord, became confused and went to West Forty-second street, instead of taking the ferry at the Lackawanna Ferry slip at West Twenty-third street.

He attracted attention on the boat by shaking hands with passengers and displaying his roll. He succeeded in giving away a considerable part of the $700 before the boat reached Weehawken. One of the passengers then call the attention of Policeman Stafford to Siki's antics.

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

Said the head of a very large business organization connected with [illegible] and his views [illegible] practical sense and his many years in New York newspapers put us [illegible] attention to [illegible] that we shall have very little up-and-down in stocks and I do not pay nearly enough attention to the future when I form the foundation of the whole stock market and our whole financial structure. I mean such things as money, corn, hay, cattle, leather, iron and steel and our basic industrial activities."

I knew that none of these columns have of late brought more responses to those dealing with real estate matters. After all, the roots of our entire structure can be traced to the ability of practically every individual to [illegible]

The most illuminating analysis of the present status of the business and speculative situation, where conditions have been worst, comes from John H. Fahey, president of the National Bank of Commerce of Worcester, Mass. It deals with many important matters, and I advise every reader to study it carefully. Here are the essential points:

1—The serious problems confronting business men are not those which are commonly supposed. The real problems of production and consumption are not to be found in the realm of finance.

2—The conditions of [illegible] and shortages of many lines have prevented the normal adjustment of [illegible] to the changed conditions which [illegible] the war. The [illegible] is that the [illegible] then [illegible] to [illegible] consumption will have [illegible] have [illegible] ability to [illegible]

3—[illegible] the [illegible] area has not been [illegible] It has [illegible] to [illegible] the [illegible] has been [illegible] a degree of [illegible] [illegible] whether [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

EARL CARNARVON'S WIDOW AGAIN WED

London, Dec. 19 (A.P.)—The Dowager Countess of Carnarvon, widow of the Earl of Carnarvon, discoverer of the tomb of Tutankhamen, was married today to Lieut.-Col. Ian Onslow Denmahteun, formerly an officer of the Grenadier Guards. The ceremony was performed at a registry office here in the presence of a few friends.

Lady Carnarvon

Colonel Denmahteun, forty-four years old, was educated at Eton and adopted the army as a career. Entering the service in 1901, he served in the South African War, where he won distinction, was made a captain in 1916 and a major in 1918 during the European war.

When Lord Carnarvon was suddenly stricken from an insect bite Lady Carnarvon started by airplane to his bedside, but was taken ill during the flight and proceeded by boat. She reached Cairo before he died on March 29.

Dr. Parks and the Quarrel Over Church Dogmas

One of the most distinguished Protestant clergyman, Dr. Leighton Parks, formerly of Boston, conducted his services last Sunday at St. Bartholomew's Church in New York in two parts. In the first part he wore the vestments of his church. In the second part he removed his vestments and told his audience that he was then speaking to them not as their clergyman, but as a doctor of theology.

As a doctor of theology, he took up the late denunciation by the Conference of Bishops of the belief which seems to be increasing among the Episcopal clergy and laity that the idea that Christ was born of a virgin mother is not be taken literally.

Dr. Parks declared that the bishops had no right to interpret the Bible and Episcopal dogmas for him. He asserted that the attack was really leveled at Bishop Lawrence of Massachusetts. But Bishop Lawrence is a rich, influential clergyman who comes from an old and exceedingly wealthy New England family, whose connections by marriage have vastly increased its influence. Therefore, Dr. Parks asserts that the attack, though really directed at him, was not made at him in person and will not be made at him in person. He declared that some poor, insignificant clergyman, who is understood to be a minister from Fort Worth, Texas, will be put on trial instead of Bishop Lawrence.

Isn't it strange that money counts so much even among the vicars of Christ? Yet we remember that Christ himself was not afraid of the rich and powerful. He did not select some peasant's hut in which to demonstrate his detestation of the money changers. He went into the temple itself where the most powerful gathered and laid about them with His whip. He did not gather around him as His disciples the rich or the socially powerful, but the workingmen. It was the wife of a carpenter who was selected as His mother.

This quarreling over dogmas when there is so much poverty and hardship, the devil's workshops in the world, reminds us of the criticism that Paine made of the sympathy which Burke poured forth with such inimitable eloquence concerning the beauty of Marie Antoinette and the ascetic splendor of the Bourbon Court without a word in behalf of the starving French people. Paine said that Burke "pitied the feathers, but forgot the dying bird."

There have been signs in the last decade that our clergy were recognizing the fact that Christ did something more practical and real than merely to preach and quarrel over dogmas and that His example required something more practical and real of His representatives in the Christian world.

The interchurch movement has already sounded the death knell of the anti-Christian twelve-hour day in the steel works and was on its way to further achievements when the newspapers published the announcement that there was a schism in its ranks and that some of its members are asking the New York courts to dissolve it.

But there is no need to be pessimistic, for we must keep in mind that, after all, clergymen and priests are only ordinary human beings, subject to all evils which beset humanity.

Profanity Offends Decency

It Also Weakens Language and Checks Progress

Copyright, 1923, Star Co.

"But above all things, my brethren, swear not, neither by heaven, neither by the earth, neither by any other oath; but let your yea be yea; and your nay, nay; lest ye fall into condemnation."—James v., 12.

Whatever is forbidden in the Bible is harmful to man. Whatever is commanded in the Bible is for man's good.

The laws of God are laws working for the good of mankind, and the orders that He gives us, misunderstood sometimes, as a father's orders are misunderstood by the child, are all for our betterment.

There is no doubt that in America, and in great cities especially, the voice of profanity is on the increase.

Little children may be heard swearing and cursing with volubile proficiency. Their elders set the example and act as tutors.

Why do men swear?

Does profanity add force to speech, or increase the impression made?

Does a man gain in respect when he swears at another man, or does he acquire dignity when he curses an animal or an inanimate object?

Is there anything more despicable than a habit of calling upon the name of the Creator in the trivial affairs of life?

Is it not contemptible, as well as blasphemous, to drag into violent discussion the name of Jesus, the teacher of peace and the founder of Christianity?

We believe that profanity would diminish if the fact could be made clear to men that cursing is ACTUALLY HARMFUL to them as individuals here, as well as an offence against abstract morality.

Instead of adding force to man's language, oaths weaken speech.

The man who swears lacks force of thought to express his meaning, and the very fact that he does swear proves his mental weakness.

Young men who resort to profanity when deeply moved simply and deliberately check their own progress.

They show lack of dignity, earn the contempt of those very persons whose admiration would gratify them.

Swearing is harmful to the mind, because it breeds disregard of the wonders of the universe. It brings man near to brutality, for it kills reverence in the soul.

"Swear not at all; neither by heaven; for it is God's throne;
"Nor by the earth; for it is His footstool; neither by Jerusalem, for it is the city of the great King.
"Neither shalt thou swear by thy head; because thou canst not make one hair white or black."—Matthew v., 34, 35, 36.

YOUNG MEN, don't think that swearing is manly. It is irreverent, stupid and demoralizing. Avoid profanity, and tell your friends who swear that if they had brains enough to express their meaning clearly they would not need to disgrace themselves by cursing.

OLD MEN, don't swear yourselves, unless you are willing to forfeit the respect of others.

And do not hesitate to rebuke and argue with young men who do swear.

"The Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh His name in vain."—Deuteronomy v., 11.

Editor Boston American

"G. O. P. Chiefs Back U. S. Plan to Aid Europe"—Heading. These are the same chiefs we believe, who, headed by President Coolidge, say they are not in favor of a bonus. Looks like they prefer aiding Europe financially rather than take a chance on another war when they fear the doughboy would remain on the outside looking in

PAUL CHANCE.

Argument For Bonus

Editor Boston American

Here is one of the many concrete examples of why the bonus should be granted. My husband did his bit. He had part of his right ear shot off and lost the hearing in that ear also. Has two bullet wounds in his right side, thereby I capacitating him from his usual labor. He draws $15 a month pension. Would a bonus be unfair compensation?

MRS. J. H. SUGARMAN.

Behind Her V Back

Editor Boston American

So fashion decrees that milady's new gown is to have the deep V in the rear instead of the front. We poor men are not much excited about it, only save the fact that it gives fair lady the chance to accuse poor man of again talking behind her back.

GUS MYERS.

Needs Morris Chair

Editor Helping Hand:

I am a semi-invalid, suffering from heart trouble. I was recently discharged from the City Hospital. The doctors say I must sit in an upright position, with my feet level with my body, and they forbid me to walk up even a short flight of stairs. So you see I cannot go up to my bed. If someone could give me an old morris chair I could sleep in that in the kitchen where it is warm—we have only one stove. I slept in a rocker for over a year, and it hurt my spine. We are too poor to buy a morris chair, as I have not worked for two years and my wife's average earnings are about $8 a week. I need clothes very much, but would be very happy indeed to get the chair.

A Fine List Sent In

Editor Helping Hand:

I am enclosing a slip with a list of things I should like given to some needy family.

MRS. J. A. F.

Your fine list was much too long to publish, but we are none the less grateful. You have been sent the address of a needy family.

Check For Fund

Editor Helping Hand:

Enclosed please find check for one dollar for American Helping Hand Fund. Maybe it might help to make some kid sing a song at himself. Merry Christmas

SKINNY SHANER

It sure will, and we thank you very much indeed. Tell you later.

Need Clothes Badly

Editor Helping Hand:

I am in a very difficult situation. My husband has just come back from the hospital, and it will be some time before he will be able to go to work again. I go out scrubbing every night from midnight to six in the morning, although I suffer a good deal from rheumatism. We are all badly in need of clothing, especially the children, a boy eleven and a girl five, and myself size 40 or 42.

MRS. M. K. S.

Young Mother In Need

Editor Helping Hand:

I am eighteen years old and the mother of a baby girl nine months old. I expect the stork again soon. My husband is ruptured and has been unable to work for some time. I have engaged the city doctor, so you see I am having a hard time. I wish I could get clothing for the two babies, and also a crib, and maybe clothing for myself and husband. I wear size 38 and size 6 shoe, and my husband wears size 34.

MRS. I. L. E.

Wants Old Carpet

Editor Helping Hand.

I have four small children to care for. I wonder if anyone has an old carpet they could give me. I have none at all, and I find it very cold these mornings for the children getting up on the bare floor, as it is none too warm for them with the poor stove we have.

LARGE FIRMS CONTRIBUTE

Several of the large business firms of Boston have come to the aid of the Helping Hand Christmas Basket Fund. There will be in each basket a loaf of Boston bread, a package of Salada tea and a stick of chocolate donated by them. But cash is what is particularly needed and every reader is urged to do his best NOW, as the time grows short in which to arrange for reaching the greatest number of poor families possible. Send it today.

Toys for Kiddies

Editor Helping Hand:

There are so many poor little kiddies without toys at Christmas time that I have encouraged my little ones to contribute the following from their abundant supply: Small doll carriage, about three-year-old size; a good sized mama doll, and an automobile kiddie car, about three-year-old size. I am sure these will gladden the heart of some poor little child, and would greatly appreciate receiving the address early enough to reach them before Christmas.

L. M. S.

We send our thanks to the kiddies. You have been sent the address of a little girl named Madeline, ten years old, who has twin sisters of three. Their father is dead, and they had begun to doubt the existence of Santa Claus.

Housekeeper Wants Work

Editor Helping Hand.

My husband is a patient at the Long Island Hospital. I am badly in need of a Winter coat, size 42. I would gladly work as housekeeper if I could get something to do. The Welfare Society of Boston is helping to pay my rent.

MRS. S. E. B.

$6.25 for Mrs. M. B. 6

Editor Helping Hand:

Please send me the address of M. B. 6, as I have six dollars and a quarter, the earnings of a small whist party, I would like to send her. Hoping this will make her Christmas a little more cheerful.

A. E. L.

Many thanks. It should make her Christmas a great deal happier. Her address has been sent you.

DR. FRANK CRANE ON WHAT CIVILIZATION IS AIMING AT

By Dr. Frank Crane

THE aim of civilization is to stop fighting.

It is to induce human beings to cease contending with each other, to induce them to co-operate with each other.

Fighting is savagery; co-operation is civilization.

Every civilizer from the lowest to highest is a peacemaker.

The mother is at work every day to keep her children from clamoring and conflict. While she is anxious for her boys to grow up study and manly, she is still more anxious that they should learn not to waste their strength in wounding and bruising each other.

Politicians may not have understood, but a million mothers all over the world understood what Woodrow Wilson meant when he spoke of being "too proud to fight."

Co-operation Means Progress

Men engaged in the same line of business are constantly meeting, getting acquainted and learning how to help one another instead of how to destroy one another. Every day we read of conventions and conferences, piano makers' conventions, laundrymen's conventions, ice dealers', cloakmakers', shoemen's, automobile manufacturers', railroad presidents' conventions.

Under co-operation the business world is making more progress in one year these times than it did in five hundred years in the Middle Ages. Co-operation has speeded up human welfare enormously.

Every thinker knows that the solution of the problem of capital and labor is not to be found in the continuance of their struggle, and that the triumph of either contestant would spell ruin. The only possible solution is to be found in that same idea which the mother has in governing her family. Somehow they must learn to work with each other and not against each other.

The World Is Too Young

That which holds the United States back, and indeed holds every other country in the world back, is partisanship, which means simply the conception of public duty as a form of struggle, cluttered up with all the hate and bitterness of struggle. If we are to progress in civilization we must somehow make this partisanship develop into patriotism.

What is the matter with the world today is that our highest conception of duty and honor is limited by the nation. We are in the stage of world partisanship. There is really no difference between the interests of Germany and France any more than there is a difference between the interests of New York and Pennsylvania.

The world is too young. The children are still scratching each other's faces and pulling hair.

The world is not so wicked as it is child-minded. It is just a great, overgrown, unlicked cub of a boy, which has yet to learn that in order to be manly it is not necessary to be a thug, brutal, ill-mannered and egoistic.

RUSSIA WANTS TO LAY CARDS ON TABLE

By Herbert Kaufman

RUSSIA asks for a parley. The Soviets evince willingness to discuss specific private claims, propose mutual abandonment of propaganda in respective territories, and request an opportunity to prove the stability and popularity of the existing government.

Although Washington is plainly convinced that Lenin, Trotzky and company aren't fit international partners, the President and Secretary Hughes won't weaken their stand by justifying it in open conference.

On the other hand, continued refusal to negotiate with Moscow may furnish another plank for radical platforms.

We can surely risk nothing of national dignity or integrity through a mere diplomatic conversation.

Besides, Tchitcherin shows a pronounced inclination to call a halt on the more or less pestiferous interference with self-determination, which he admits and likewise lays at our door.

Mexico's affronts to our sovereignty were far worse than the outrages we suffered at the paws of the bear. And yet common ground was found for a composition of grievances once we got down to hard-pan.

The problem must be met eventually, why not now?

Does Flagless Finance Want Obregon's Hide?

Necessity for intervention again looms across the Rio Grande. Five distinct insurrections are in full blast. Each rebel chieftain is both an enemy of Obregon and an avowed foe of competitive juntas.

Before the red primaries are closed a dozen more candidates will enter the field.

Our friends to the south vote by bullet, not ballot; and sad experience declares that we'll be rushing an army to the border if the battle-royal, yonder, isn't promptly halted.

The Monroe Doctrine should be extended to safeguard responsible and constructive leadership from apple-cart upsetters and the murderous tools of intriguing financers.

Heretics, Miracle Mongers and Optimists

Clerical rebels also have their inning.

Dr. Leighton Parks of St. Bartholomew's Church is the latest divine to repudiate virgin birth and bodily resurrection.

A far cry to the Steppes of Russia, where peasant masses have been following a miracle monger from shrine to shrine, acclaiming the professed saint as a second Messiah. Venerated ikons, long grown dim and tawdry, are restored to pristine color and the halos of image glow with strange fire at his touch. When Soviet commissars puts the monk through a third degree they, disclosed a fakir and a bottle of trick paint.

Old stuff! Chaldean necromancers worked identical stunts. Charlatans similarly gulled the Middle Ages. Phosphorescent solutions were employed by Babylonish hierschs to write mene, mene, tekel, upharsin on Belshazzar's walls.

But all believers of miracles aren't overseas. Local holders of German securities to the tune of several billion dollars, organize to compel face recognition of Reich bonds, claiming that Berlin deliberately depreciated the mark to defraud foreign creditors. You'll note that exchange quotations don't share their optimism.

STELLA DALLAS By Olive Higgins Prouty

New and Intensely Interesting Serial of a Marriage of an Educated Man to an Untutored Woman

HOW THE STORY STARTED

Stella Dallas and her husband, Stephen, do not live together. They have a daughter, thirteen years old, named Laurel, who stays most of the year with the mother. These two are now at a Summer hotel in New England, where the other guests look askance at the painted, overdressed elder woman. The time has come for Laurel to visit her father in New York. He meets her at the station and takes her to a hotel. She goes to visit Mrs. Morrison. The story now goes back to the marriage of Stephen and Stella at Milhampton. Stella starts a flirtation with Alfred Munn. The leading women of the town begin to drop her.

By OLIVE HIGGINS PROUTY

Author of "Bobbie, General Manager," "The Fifth Wheel," "The Star in the Window," Etc.

IT was a very unhappy day for Stella when she first learned that Stephen had resigned from all his Milhampton clubs. She thought it was the cruelest blow he could deal her. At that time Stella was mercifully unaware how many more cruel blows were to follow, not from Stephen alone, but from everybody—from all sides.

They didn't come all at once. If they had, she must have been convinced of the futility of her effort, and given up her fight early.

Her defeat was gradual. She lost ground by degrees. Her various points of vantage and fortresses of strength fell slowly. This season she failed to receive an announcement of the Current Events Class; next season her name appeared to have been dropped from the Charity Ball list. The season after, the small Luncheon Club she belonged to was reorganized and she was omitted.

Every year there were personal slights of various kinds, coolnesses, intentional inattentions from all quarters. Laughingly hitherto, too—she told herself that the people in Milhampton must be having some sort of chronic eye difficulty. So many old friends and acquaintances failed to recognize her, lately. But Stella didn't lose hope. She didn't, anyhow, show that she lost hope. She managed to keep her eyes bright, and her lips smiling, and her head erect, in spite of repeated rebukes.

"Why, I've got to. For Lollie's sake," she said. "Lollie mustn't know her mother has got anything to look sour-faced over. Oh, well be all right after a while—Lollie and me," she told Effie McDavitt. "We'll come out on top in the end. You watch us."

It was always "Lollie and me," always "we," and "us," by that time. Stella didn't even think in the singular number, since her maternal instinct had worked its way up through her vanities and self-interests and appeared in her consciousness. The seed of it must have been planted deep, for it took a period of years to appear. In vain Stephen had looked for it when Laurel was a baby; and later when she was in the helpless, toddling stage.

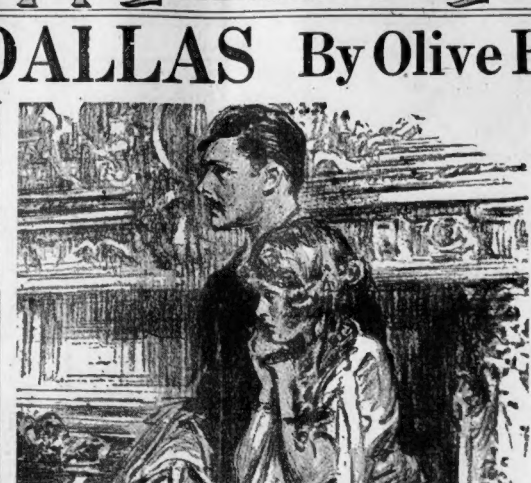
For the first half-dozen years of Laurel's life, Stella took her lightly. Not that she neglected her in any obvious way. She couldn't. There were certain manners and forms in the modern, bringing-up of a child that had to be observed. She had an excellent nurse-girl for Lollie; she spent hours in the selection of Lollie's clothes; she had a Mother Goose cretonne at Lollie's windows; a Noah's Ark paper on Lollie walls.

There were low chairs, and low shelves. Stella loved to show Laurel's room to guests when occasion arose. Laurel benefited by many an attention from Stella in those days that did not spring from the maternal instinct. However, the maternal instinct must have been growing underneath the surface, and growing according to Nature's own methods—sending down tough wiry roots in the dark, all the while it was sending up its tender arrow-pointed shaft of life, for when it did shoot through into light, the plant was strong and vigorous.

Perhaps the first time that Stella was aware of the new insistent force within her was the day Laurel came home from school with the news about the party.

"Gosh, Effie," she had said afterwards, "I don't care what people do to me, but to stick hatpins into Lollie—into my baby! Say, that's more than I can stand. I'm ready to use my claws on anybody who hurts Lollie."

During the years between Laurel's sixth birthday and her thirteenth there were many times for Stella to use her claws. There were many times that Laurel was hurt and Stella knew it. "Though the funny little kid doesn't think I do. She never lets on to me. I just have to guess at it from the way she acts."



Laurel Dallas and her father

What Is the Effect Upon the Two, and Especially Upon Their Strange and Beautiful Child Laurel?

If she came home from school especially quiet and uncommunicative, and was not very hungry at dinner, Stella would begin to be suspicious.

"What's the matter?" she would demand with a piercing look.

"Nothing," Laurel would reply, feigned surprise and wonder in her voice.

"Has anything happened at school?"

"No."

"Who'd you play with at recess?"

"Nobody special."

"Did you play all alone?"

"No."

"Look here, Lollie. Answer me. Has somebody been horrid to you? Has somebody hurt your feelings?"

"No."

No Dessert

If Stella stared at her hard enough, probed long enough, Laurel might reply, "My stomach aches a little bit," and pay the price of two shredded wheat biscuit and no dessert for dinner.

It would never be from Laurel that Stella would get the first wind of a party in prospect from which Laurel was omitted. Laurel would never tell her that the girls in her class were meeting every few days at each other's houses to work for a fair, or to rehearse a play or fete in which she had no part.

When information of an event of this sort did reach Stella, she knew then what had been the cause of Laurel's quiet, brown-study day a week ago. And yet she couldn't use her claws after all. It would be the worst policy in the world. For the sake of Lollie's future, for that dim, far-away, full-of-promise time when Lollie would "come out" girls "come out," now, in Milhampton, she must be as nice and purry as she knew how to the women she knew who could help her daughter.

As experienced as Laurel was in certain of the world's cruelties, and as mature in her calm manner of acceptance of whatever befell, she was amazingly young and innocent about many of the facts of life. Another antithesis. Much younger and much more innocent than the group of sophisticated little girls in her class at school. They were constantly spending days and nights with each other.

Their intimacies led to easy discussions of all sorts of subjects. By the time they were twelve their activities out of school were closely resembling their mothers'. And their conversations, too. There were already conflicting invitations for every Saturday. Laurel could catch bits of conversation, now and then, as the various competing parties and entertainments were reviewed afterwards, and their details discussed and criticised. Most of these girls became perceiving and canny little critics before they had finished playing dolls.

Laurel had no intimate friends, belonged to no group, joined in no daily gossipings. Her critical faculty went through no such course of training. She was still groping for the whys and wherefores of many of society's verdicts long after her dolls were put away. Why had she no intimate friends? Why was she never asked to lunch, or to spend the night? Why had she been dropped from the Widow's Mite Club which met Saturday mornings at Stephanie Holland's? The worldly-wise little girls at school could have told her.

"It's your mother."

Thought Mother Beautiful

"What's the matter with my mother?" she would have asked, surprised. Laurel thought her mother beautiful. The little girls would have shrugged and said, "Our mothers don't 'Know her.'" With just the same shrug and inflection that had silenced them.

But Laurel never asked questions of the little girls. She passed through her childhood blindfolded, picking her way unfortunately along, sensitive finger-tips stretched out before her to avoid sharp corners and ungiving walls, clinging close in the protection of solitude and isolation.

Housewife's Idea Box

An Easy Way to Set in Medallions

The hardest part, when setting in a medallion, is to roll the edges of the material. The next time mark off the size of the medallion on the material. Have it hemstitched just inside of the mark. Cut through the stitching. Whip in the medallion. This both prevents the necessity of rolling the edge and makes the insert strong-er.

WAYS OF A HUSBAND

SEQUEL TO "WHEN A GIRL MARRIES"

By Ann Lisle

"TWO tickets!" I cried, warming with pleasure. "You didn't tell me. Is it a surprise?"

"Now, Anne," replied Jim placatingly. "It's one of those musical comedies you hate. And besides I'm not the host. I'm invited."

Ann Lisle

"O h—I invited," I managed blankly. "And I'm to sit home—like an old-fashioned wife awaiting your return."

Jim turned on his heel.

"Order the coffee in the living room," he flung back at me. "I've half an hour. And I think I'll employ it telling you a thing or two it won't hurt you to hear."

Jim looked up from the after-dinner coffee and cigarette he was enjoying in our cozy living room and said pointedly:

"In our pleasant little chat at the dinner table you thought you were scoring off a few points on Hubby, didn't you? Look here, Anne, you feel badly treated a lot of the time and are always ready to criticise my way of doing things. Does it ever occur to you that I've a few complaints of my own to register?

Hit Nail on Head

"I don't understand you," I murmured, amazed at his tone.

"You hit the nail on the head. You don't understand me. Well, I'm going to give you the key to Friend Husband's intricate nature. If you knew a darn thing about men, Anne, you might guess that your way of living don't suit me by a darn sight."

"My way of living!" I gasped. "What do I do—"

"What you golly well please! You don't imagine, do you, that I like the way you rush off to business in the morning and come home in the evening the fact that I wasn't and ready and mingle with the dickens knows who all day long. You never ask me what I'd like to do, or how I'd like you to live your life. But I'm about ready—"

"Jim, I didn't know I was doing anything to displease or grieve you," I answered, something in his evident sincerity taking the wind out of my sails of wrath. "How can you mind my being out when you are? I'm never busy when you want me."

"Think I like this 'A. L. Harrison and Company' business any better now than when I came home and found you at it?" snarled Jim.

"You know how I came to go into business," I replied. "I had to when you were away. Money—and loneliness drove me."

"We've been all over that before," Jim cut in. "Now we'll go on to something new, if you don't mind. What I wasn't here and you thought you had to work—that was your lookout. But I'm here now. Taking care of my wife is supposed to be my lookout. And you act as if I couldn't support you or fill your life or something equally flattering. I don't fill your life as far as the casual onlooker can see. You insist on going your own way in business. That's new for a woman. I insist on going mine in society. That's not so new for a man."

"Are you blaming my business for your interest in Ruth Gregory?" I laughed almost hysterically.

"Leave her out, please," snapped Jim.

"How can I?" I asked. "It isn't the MacAvoys or Count Eldish who are going to the theatre with you tonight on the second of your pair of tickets."

At Sword's Points

"Clever, aren't you?" Jim drawled. "What if I am going to the theatre with a good friend like Ruth Gregory? First of all, she asked me. Second, I want to go. And third—as I said before—you run around with Ralph too darn much, and when you aren't doing that you're wrapped up in business. A swell time of it I'd have, if I hadn't some interests——"

"Some interests!" I cried, striving to keep my voice from breaking on the words. "Oh, Jim—don't you see that it's your interests that drive me to seeking interests of my own? When I married you I wanted to be a simple, home-loving, home-making wife. What you—the things any normal woman wants of marriage. You didn't want them. You were restless from the beginning and interested in people to whom I had to adjust myself. Even a few of them became good friends later, it was hard at first for me to recognize the fact that I wasn't enough for you——"

"Some tirade, isn't it?" sneered Jim.

SECRETS OF HEALTH

SOMETHING ABOUT VITAMINES A

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.

YOU may like the taste of a little fat beef or a little fat pork or some other animal fat, when it is freshly cooked, but probably do not like it as well if at all after it has been potted.

Dr. Reed

And you do not like the taste of any meats after they have been overdone in even the best of storage.

The reason is that by both processes they have partially or entirely lost their "vitamines A."

These are the mysterious nutritive substances that are soluble in oils.

They exist naturally in most, but not all, fats and oils of both plants and animals.

The loss of vitamines A from the food does not affect the system as markedly as the loss of vitamines B because we store up vitamines A in our own fats and oils, and draw upon this reserve when the outside supply is cut off.

But the continued use of food deficient in vitamines A surely results in loss of both energy and weight followed by still more serious disturbances.

This was shown in the Spanish-American War when the soldiers were fed largely either on potted meats in which the vitamines A had been practically destroyed by the cooking or on the notorious "embalmed beef" in which there had been not only destruction of these vitamines, but in which putrefactive products had developed from the influence of the temperature.

Of course the vitamine question was not then understood.

Vitamines had been discovered only the year before, in 1897. It takes many years for a scientific truth to be recognized by the medical profession; and, of would seem, about that much longer for it to be recognized by the military profession.

But, fortunately, time enough had elapsed for both professions to grasp the meaning of vitamines when the World War broke out. The whole question of rations was turned over to the medical services with the result that the American Expeditionary Force was the best provisioned army in history.

The World War also brought out the value of a full vitamine diet among the soldiers, as shown in their high energy and efficiency index as contrasted with the low energy and efficiency index of civilian populations that were deprived of butter fat, eggs and wheat—the three great vitamine-containing articles of diet.

One of the unexpected early effects of these low vitamine diets among the civil populations were symptoms of low nutrition nearly always associated with a particular form of sore eyes, all of which symptoms promptly disappeared when our civilian relief service supplied the missing articles of diet.

Vitamines A occur in largest proportion in butter fat, egg yolk and whole wheat flour, and are lowest in the pure white wheat flour and in vegetable wheat flour and in vegetable fats and in vegetable fats.

Escalloped Cabbage

One head cabbage, 1 cup grated cheese, 2 cups milk, 2 tablespoons flour, 2 tablespoons fat, 1 teaspoon salt, pepper. Shred the cabbage and cook it in boiling, slightly salted water for about 20 minutes, until it is just tender. Remove from the fire, drain. Make a white sauce of the fat, flour, milk, and seasonings. Put a layer of the cooked cabbage into a buttered baking dish. Add a layer of the grated cheese, another of cabbage, and one of cheese, repeating until the material be all used. Pour the white sauce over the cabbage and cheese, allowing a little time for the sauce to become mixed with the cabbage. Place the dish in the oven and allow to brown on top.

Medbury Says—

By John P. Medbury

THIS is just the right season for bear hunting, and many a man is in the woods trying to shoot a rug for the parlor floor.

THIS is wonderful sport for the hunters, but the bears don't get much fun out of it.

ANY grizzly who is used to living in a tree doesn't like to spend the rest of his life lying in front of your fire place.

BUT if you want a nice fur rug you have to go out in the woods and shoot one. You can't very well telephone to the woods and ask a bear to come in.

THIS average bear wouldn't know where you lived even if you gave him the address.

ONE woman wouldn't let her husband go hunting because she was jealous. She said the last time he went into the woods she found out that a bear had hugged him.

SHE wouldn't have known anything about it only she discovered a grizzly hair on his coat.

WHENEVER a bear wants to hug you to death he doesn't stop to ask you whether you're married or not.

HE doesn't care whether you're single, divorced or only separated.

A BEAR figures that a man in his arms is worth two in his wife's.

ONE bride of two months said she'd rather have her husband hunt polar bears because they were colder.

BUT a polar bear can give you just as warm a reception as any other kind.

THERE only trouble with shooting polar bears is that they don't make good rugs. You have to keep them in the ice box.

IF you haven't got an ice box, then you have to put them on the radiator or any other cold place.

SO whenever your wife wants a new fur rug, just go out in the nearest alley and shoot a couple of cats. They're more plentiful, and easier to find.
